ST Correspondent

Chandigarh, August 2: Rahul Gandhi- Congress MP and Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha- has claimed that the Enforcement Directorate (ED) was planning a raid on him. He said some ED insiders had told him about a raid being planned, and that he was 'waiting with open arms'. In a post on X on Friday, Rahul Gandhi said, "Apparently, 2 in 1 didn't like my Chakravyuh speech. ED 'insiders' tell me a raid is being planned. Waiting with open arms, @dir_ed. Chai and biscuits on me!" Former probationary IAS officer Puja Khedkar's mother gets bail in criminal intimidation case 'Rahul had on July 29 given a speech in the Lok Sabha during a discussion on the Union Budget, where he said: "Thousands of years ago, in Kurukshetra, six people trapped Abhimanyu in a 'Chakravyuh' and killed him. I did a little research and found out that 'Chakravyuh' is also known as 'Padmavuhy' - which means 'Lotus formation'... In the 21st century, a new 'Chakravyuh' has been formed... What was done with Abhimanyu, is being done with India - the youth, farmers, women, small and medium businesses." Rahul's speech was flayed by BJP MP Anurag Thakur over Chakravyuh statement and said the country has seen many "Chakravyuhs of Congress Party".

Kerala CM Pinarayi Vijayan orders withdrawal of controversial note restricting scientists' comments on landslides

Tiruvananthapuram, August 2: Kerala Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan has directed his Chief Secretary V Venu to withdraw a controversial note issued by the State Disaster Management Authority (SDMA), which restrained science and technology institutions in the state from sharing their opinions and study reports with the media regarding the recent deadly landslides in Wayanad. In a statement on Thursday night, Vijayan said the news that the SDMA had directed scientific institutions and scientists not to visit the disaster-affected Meppadi Panchayat in Wayanad and not to express their opinions was misleading. "The state government does not have such a policy," the Chief Minister said. "The Chief Secretary has been directed to immediately intervene and withdraw the communication that conveyed such a message," he said.

GPS coordinates, aerial drone pictures used by rescuers to locate survivors

Sanjay Kumar

Wayanad, August 2: Rescue teams on Friday used GPS coordinates from aerial drone pictures and cell phones, including the last location of people who lived in the landslides-hit areas of Wayanad to help locate survivors, amidst accelerated search operations after the completion of the 190-foot-long Bailey bridge by the Army. A family of four was rescued from an isolated house in an area near Padavett Kunnu on the fourth day of the deadly landslides, giving hope to hundreds of rescuers, racing against time to search for survivors. With nearly 300 people still missing, the death toll is expected to go up. As many as 201 people have died and 264 were injured in the massive landslides that hit Wayanad district in the wee hours of July 30. Additionally, 130 body parts were also recovered, according to the Kerala Health Department. The search and rescue operations that resumed early morning received an impetus as the Bailey bridge helped the rescue teams to move the heavy machinery, including excavators, and ambulances to the worst-affected Mundakkai and Chooralmala hamlets. Former probationary IAS officer Puja Khedkar's mother gets bail in criminal intimidation case 'According to official sources, the extent of human loss will emerge when rescuers clear houses covered by debris and wooden logs using heavy machinery. Authorities reported that many more body parts had been collected and genetic testing was under way to identify the remains.

High court transfers coaching centre deaths case to CBI

Simmi Kaur Babbar

New Delhi, August 2: The Delhi High Court on Friday transferred the probe into the drowning of three civil services aspirants at the basement of a coaching centre here from Delhi Police to the CBI "to ensure the public has no doubt over the investigation". A bench headed by Acting Chief Justice Manmohan asked the Central Vigilance Commission (CVC) to appoint a senior officer to oversee the probe by the CBI in the criminal case. "Having regard to the nature of the incident and to ensure that the public has no doubt with regards to investigation, this court transfers the probe to the CBI," the court said. It castigated the police and Municipal Corporation of Delhi (MCD) over the drowning incident, saying it was unable to fathom how the students could not come out and sought to know whether the doors were blocked or staircases narrow. The bench, also comprising Justice Tushar Rao Gedela, said administratively

Delhi has a multiplicity of authorities which are only passing the buck and doing nothing. The public perception is that civic authorities are inefficient, the bench said.

It said physical infrastructure in Delhi is nearly 75 years old and it is not only inadequate but poorly maintained. On being informed by the MCD commissioner, who was present in the court, that the storm water drains in the area were dysfunctional al, the bench asked why didn't the officials inform the MCD chief about it earlier. The bench also ordered the removal of encroachments and unauthorised constructions, including on storm water and sewage drains, in the Rajinder Nagar area. It said MCD officials are not bothered and it has become a norm. The court said with the rise in Delhi's population, the city needs a robust system and due to various subsidy schemes, the migration in the national capital is also increasing. It is time to have a relook at Delhi's administrative, financial and physical infrastructure, the bench said and formed a committee headed by the chief secretary to deal with the issue. Slapping the police, the high court said, "Mercifully, you have not challenged rainwater for entering the basement, the way you arrested the SUV driver for driving his car there."

Didn't cancel NEET-UG 24 examination as there was no systematic breach: Supreme Court

Navdeep Singh Sahni

New Delhi, August 2: The Supreme Court on Friday said it did not cancel the controversy-ridden NEET-UG 2024 examination amid concerns of paper leak because there was no systematic breach of its sanctity. In its detailed reasons for the order which was pronounced on July 23, a bench of Chief Justice DY Chandrachud and Justices JB Pardiwala and Manoj Misra said the National Testing Agency (NTA) must stop its flip-flop which was noticed this year as it does not serve the interest of students. The bench issued a slew of directions and expanded the remit of the Centre-appointed panel headed by former ISRO chief K Radhakrishnan to review the NTA's functioning and recommend exam reforms. It said since the remit of the panel has been expanded, the committee would submit its report by September 30 on various measures to rectify deficiencies in the examination system. Former probationary IAS officer Puja Khedkar's mother gets bail in criminal intimidation case ' The bench said the Radhakrishnan panel should consider framing standard operating procedure for adoption of technological advancements to strengthen the examination system. It said the issues which have arisen during the NEET-UG examination should be rectified by the Centre. On July 23, the top court dismissed the pleas seeking cancellation and re-test of the controversy-ridden exam, holding that there was no evidence on record to conclude that it was "vitiated" on account of "systemic breach" of its sanctity. The top court, while pronouncing the order, said its detailed reasons would follow. The interim verdict came as a shot in the arm for the embattled NDA government and the NTA, which were facing strong criticism and protests, on streets and in Parliament, over alleged large-scale malpractices like question paper leak, fraud and impersonation in the prestigious test held on May 5. Over 23 lakh students gave the National Eligibility-cum-Entrance Test-Undergraduate (NEET-UG) in 2024 for admissions to MBBS, BDS, AYUSH and other related courses.

Air India suspends Tel Aviv flights amid escalating Middle East tensions

Tejinder Kaur Babbar

Chandigarh, August 2: Air India has suspended all flights to and from Tel Aviv, effective immediately until August 8, amid escalating tensions in the Middle East, the airline said on Friday. Airlines are avoiding Iranian and Lebanese airspace and cancelling flights to Israel and Lebanon, as concerns grow over a possible conflict in the region after the killing of senior members of militant groups Hamas and Hezbollah this week. "In view of the ongoing situation in parts of the Middle East, we have suspended scheduled operation of our flights to and from Tel Aviv with immediate effect up to and including 08 August 2024," Air India said in a post on X. Former probationary IAS officer Puja Khedkar's mother gets bail in criminal intimidation case ' Singapore Airlines also appeared to no longer be using Iranian airspace for any of its routes, according to flight tracker Flightradar24.

The airline did not respond to a request for comment. Taiwan's EVA Air and China Airlines also appeared to be avoiding Iran airspace for flights to Amsterdam on Friday which previously had flown over Iran, Flightradar24 data showed. The airlines did not immediately respond to a request for comment on the route changes. Many airlines, including US and European airlines, already avoid flying over Iran, especially since the reciprocal missile and drone attacks in April between Iran and Israel. Singapore Airlines' flight to London Heathrow early on Friday went north of Iran through Turkmenistan and Azerbaijan, rather than crossing through Iran as it did the day before, Flightradar24 showed. However, a significant number of airlines on Friday were still flying over Iran, including United Arab Emirates carriers Etihad, Emirates and FlyDubai, as well as Qatar Airways and Turkish Airlines.

Over the past two days, Air India, Germany's Lufthansa Group, U.S. carriers United Airlines and Delta Air, and Italy's ITA Airways said they had suspended flights to Tel Aviv. Airlines this week have also been cancelling and delaying flights to the Lebanese capital Beirut after a strike in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights on Saturday. Israel has blamed the attack on Lebanon-based armed group Hezbollah, which denied involvement. Canada on Thursday issued a notice to Canadian aircraft to avoid Lebanese airspace for one month due to the risk to aviation from military activity. Britain has for the past month advised pilots of potential risk from anti-aircraft weaponry and military activity in Lebanon's airspace. Should an all-out war break out in the Middle East, OpsGroup said civil aviation will likely face the risk of drones and missiles crossing airways, as well as the increased risk of GPS spoofing - a growing phenomena around Lebanon and Israel where militaries and other actors broadcast signals that trick a plane's GPS system into thinking it is somewhere it is not.

Mamata Banerjee threatens to hit the roads if GST on insurance premiums is not rolled back

New Delhi, August 2: Echoing Union Road Transport and Highway Minister Nitin Gadkari, West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Thursday demanded rollback of GST on life insurance and health insurance premiums and threatened to hit the roads if the Central government did not pay heed to the demand. 'Our demand to Government of India is to roll back GST from life insurance and medical insurance premiums on grounds of people's health imperatives,' CM Mamata Banerjee wrote on X. 'This GST is bad because it adversely affects the people's ability to take care of their basic vital needs,' the Trinamool Congress supremo said. 'If Government of India does not roll back the anti-people GST, we will be bound to hit the road,' she warned.

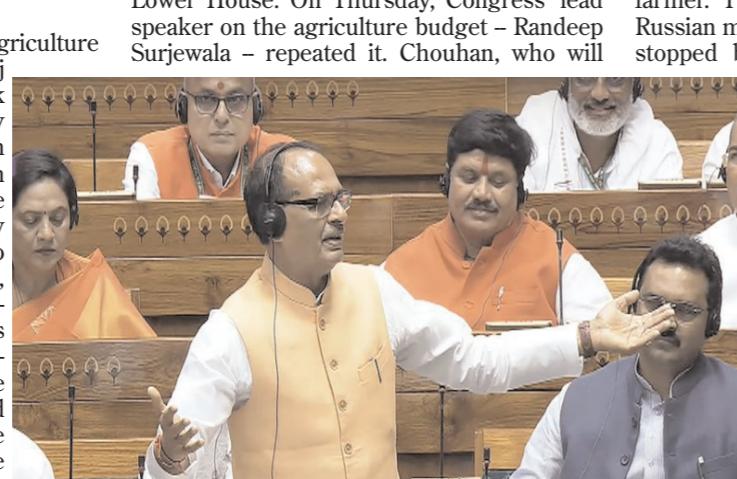

Dhankhar makes a case for upwardly revision of MSP rates

New Delhi, Aug 2: Rajya Sabha chairman Jagdeep Dhankhar on Friday asked the government to keep revising the Minimum Support Prices of crops upwardly to control the market forces and ensure farmers get a fair remuneration for their produce. Dhankhar spoke when Agriculture minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan was replying to the debate on union agriculture budget in the Rajya Sabha today. "We often speak of low MSP procurement but the fact is that low procurement on MSP means farmers are getting better prices in the market and are therefore not selling on MSP. MSP is essential to ensure that farmers get an assured minimum price if he does not get an adequate and better market price," Dhankhar said.

Shivraj Chouhan's 'adharmaik' dig on Cong for Chakravyuh-Shakuni references from Mahabharata

Naresh Malhotra

New Delhi, August 2: Union agriculture and farmers' welfare minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan on Friday took swipes at the Congress asking why do leaders of the principal opposition party remember "adharmaik (non-religious) references from the Mahabharata instead of the deeply inspirational episodes related to Lord Krishna. "Shakuni, Chakravyuh, Choudap (the traditional dice game)...why does Congress make only these non-religious references from the Mahabharata while we in the BJP remember Lord Krishna, Lord Kanhaiya when we recall the Epic." Chouhan said at the start of his hour long reply on Friday to the debate on agriculture budget in Rajya Sabha in which he alleged that the Congress DNA was "anti-farmer." Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi had first made the "chakravyuh" reference during his Union Budget speech in the continue his reply on Monday, said farmers, for the ruling BJP, are not "vote banks but Gods." "Who perpetrated frauds on farmers? It was Congress leaders whose DNA is anti-farmer. Pt Nehru wanted to impose the Russian model of agriculture in India and was stopped by Chaudhry Charan Singh; late Indira Gandhi's government imposed levies on farmers; late Rajiv Gandhi spoke of bringing an agriculture price policy but did nothing to raise farmers' incomes; late PV Narasimha Rao brought liberalisation but farm related companies were not delicensed," said Chouhan listing copious data to stress that the BJP led NDA government had truly empowered farmers. The minister saluted the farmers of Punjab and Haryana for filling India's food basket and assured them continued MSP support. Though silent on legal MSP - a long standing demand of the farmers protesting on the borders of Punjab and Haryana-Chouhan said MSP rate was being continuously revised and was many times higher than what the UPA led Congress used to give. Chouhan asked why the Congress did not implement the MS Swaminathan commission recommendations to give MSP at 50% profit on cost of production and why did UPA ministers neglect the suggestion citing distortions of the market as the reason. "The report came in 2006 when you were in power. Why did you not implement it?" he asked. The minister also gave data to say that the BJP government had enhanced MSP several times as compared to the UPA regime besides working on irrigation, micro irrigation, mechanization support in agriculture and comprehensive crop insurance for farmers. "On bajra we raised the MSP by 1375 Rs per quintal since 2014; on jau by Rs 750; on ragi by Rs 2790 Rs; on wheat by 875 Rs per quintal...this is our commitment," he said telling farmers that the government will procure the entire Arhar, masoor, urad - we will buy entire stock of arhar, masoor and urad to achieve self reliance in pulses. The minister also rejected lead Congress speaker Randeep Surjewala's take that agriculture budget had been slashed. "Budget allocation for agriculture was Rs 27, 673 cr in 2013-15. In 2024-25 it is 1, 32, 470 cr.

City initiative to protect strays in monsoon

MUMBAI. In an initiative to protect Mumbai's stray animals during the monsoon, Adv Ashish Shelar, MLA of Bandra West, has teamed up with Rahul Kanal of the I Love Mumbai Foundation to unveil the city's first Monsoon shelters. These shelters, located across Bandra, Khar, and Santacruz, are designed to offer refuge to stray dogs and cats during the heavy rains.

Shelar emphasized the importance of providing safe spaces for these animals, particularly during Mumbai's monsoon season. "These shelters are more than just structures; they are places where our stray animals can find comfort and protection from the rain," he said. The shelters are built to withstand Mumbai's weather, offering a dry environment for multiple animals. Positioned in areas with high stray populations, they are accessible to animals in need, providing relief from the monsoon's impact.

"There are plans to expand the initiative beyond its initial areas, with the aim of covering more neighborhoods across Mumbai. This project serves as a model for other cities facing similar challenges, showing the impact of community collaboration in addressing social issues," Kanal said.

Bar employee arrested for molesting woman

Kolkata. The New Market Police has arrested one Irfan Khan (31), an employee of a bar on Chowringhee Road, for allegedly molesting a female staffer of another bar in central Kolkata. The complainant alleged that the accused — a resident of VIP Nagar in Anandapur — molested her in front of his workplace on July 31 and snatched her mobile phone after stalking her for the past 15 months. She had allegedly asked him to stay away from her in the past.

The accused, who had been charged under multiple sections of the BNS, was produced at a local court on Thursday. Probe was underway, cops said.

He was handed over to the police thereafter.

Freshers get separate hostel, Main Hostel jitters for seniors

Kolkata. A batch of 12 first-year students arrived at the Jadavpur University's Old PG Hostel on Thursday, which has been earmarked as a freshers' hostel from this year along with the New Block Hostel. Meanwhile, some senior students (UG3, UG4 and PG) who have been asked to relocate to the Main Hostel expressed fear and insecurity to the authorities and did not want to shift.

TOI had earlier reported that not only freshers but UG2 students will also be kept in separate hostels — New Boys' and the second-floor of JPJU quarters.

Dean of students Rajat Ray said: "We have been able to earmark the New Block and the Old PG Hostel exclusively for freshers. Already 12 students from the science faculty have arrived at the Old PG Hostel. Students from arts and engineering faculty will arrive next." Diganta Saha, a computer science professor, has been assigned the responsibility of warden for the freshers' hostels.

A parent of a fresher from Bankura said: "We are apprehensive after last year's incident but at least they have ensured that first-years are accommodated separately." A fresher student from North Bengal said: "It is a relief that we will stay separately and not with seniors."

While senior borders were being shifted to the Main Hostel, a section of them shared their unwillingness. Math PG student Abhijit Samanta said: "I do not want to relocate because the culture of Main Hostel is not safe. We have even approached the VC but we have been told that it is the university's decision and we will have to abide by it."

Medical student found hanging in hostel in Karnataka's Chitradurga. A second-year student, Manoj KL, aged 22, from Basaveshwara Medical College in Chitradurga, was found hanging in his hostel room.

Population, 'entertainment biz' influx has changed area, frayed social fabric

Kolkata. Two sides of what has now turned into one of the city's busiest neighbourhoods have transformed remarkably — and in diverging ways — over the last few decades. One side of the Bypass has changed from neighbourhoods populated by the underprivileged people living in colonies to the neighbourhoods dotted with skyscrapers and stand-alone buildings housing the upper and middle class people. The other side of the road, which once had bheris and wetlands, are now dotted with illegal buildings and "singing bars" that have turned it into a big extortion zone.

Kajal Kumar Ghosh (74), a retired professor of physics at a govt college in Asansol, had bought a flat at VIP Nagar in 2004. Since then, he has been witness to a great change in the character and social fabric of the Bypass belt. "At that time our building was new and there were several vacant plots in its vicinity. In fact, Bypass had a different look then and the lane leading to our apartment had many tile-shed houses. The old population is still here but the colonies are not. Several illegal buildings have come up on the land where the colonies were located. Extortion gangs are on the prowl and they ask for money from those buying new property," said Ghosh.

Moloy Malakar (70) who has been living near Uttar Panchannagram since 1982 recounted that the other side of the Bypass was spread over fields and wetlands, with a few shanties where fishermen mostly lived. "The character of this side has changed completely and the population has also increased with many migrating to these areas. A big chunk of this population include employees of private firms in Bypass, Salt Lake and Rajarhat areas. The transformation has also resulted in syndicate raj, crimes and drunken brawls at pubs at night," said Malakar.

Sushanta Kumar Ghosh, chairman of KMC's borough XII and councillor of ward 108 that covers several Bypass areas, conceded that there are rampant violations by bars or pubs that stay open till 2 am or 2.30 am, anti-social activities and illegal constructions in the Bypass zone. "I am requesting the administration for a crackdown on these illegal activities. Apart from the negative side, Bypass has become a throbbing zone in the city after Park Street. People from different parts are flocking here for food and entertainment.

High-rises, hospitals, Metro connectivity and good transport have improved the standard of living here," he said.

Suresh Agarwal (56), a businessman who has been living near Bypass for over 20 years said the transformation has both good and bad aspects. "While the Bypass has worn a new look over the last few years, there should also be lens on anti-social activities in some areas," he said.

Like Agarwal, Shahensha Burman (71), a resident of Purbalok, has also seen the transformation. "Bypass has become one of the city's prominent locations. But in some parts, there are still law and order issues," he said.

7% of land in Chennai will be submerged by 2040: Study

CHENNAI. By 2040, around 7% of the land in Chennai would be submerged due to rise in sea levels, according to a report by the Center for Study of Science, Technology and Policy (CSTEP).

The report 'Sea level rise scenarios and inundation maps for selected Indian coastal cities,' which was released on Thursday, stated that Adyar Eco-Park, Island Ground, State Emblem Monument, Pallikaranai wetland and port would be at high risk of sea level rise.

The report projects inundation of 7.29% (86.6 sq.km) of Chennai Metropolitan Area (CMA) by 2040, and go up to 9.65% (114.31 sq.km) by 2060, 15.11% (159.28 sq.km) by 2080, and 16.9% (207.04 sq.km) by 2100.

The report also stated that Chennai has seen a 0.679 cm rise in sea level from 1987 to 2021, with an annual rise of 0.066 cm. The maximum sea level rise (4.44 cm or 0.31 cm per year) over the past 30 years was observed at the Mumbai station.

The increasing urbanisation trend, particularly along the coast, is closely associated with vulnerability due to climate change drivers. Low-lying coastal towns are now more exposed and vulnerable to sea level rise, the report stated. 15 cities and towns from the east and west coast of India were selected for analysis. Tier-I cities considered in the study are Mumbai and Chennai.

The report states that industrial areas in Thoothukudi would face the highest risk of inundation.

Identification of slum dwellers involves complicated process: Supreme Court on functioning of Maharashtra slum areas

NEW DELHI. Observing that identification of slum dwellers involved a "complicated process" of proof of such a status, Supreme Court on Tuesday ordered review of the functioning of the Maharashtra Slum Areas (Improvement, Clearance and Redevelopment) Act, 1971. "The executive branch has a constitutional duty to ensure that the purpose and object of a statute is accomplished while implementing it. It has the additional duty to closely monitor the working of a statute...reviewing and assessing the implementation of a statute is an integral part of Rule of Law," a bench of justices PS Narasimha and Aravind Kumar said Tuesday. The bench said the judiciary has another role to perform and that is of a facilitator of access to justice and effective functioning of constitutional bodies. "In this role, the judiciary does not review executive and legislative actions, but only nudges and provides impetus to systemic reforms," it said. The directions were issued in a judgement dismissing an appeal of Yash Developers against a Bombay high court verdict. HC had upheld cancellation of a slum redevelopment project in Borivli granted in favour of the real estate firm in 2003. The project was unduly prolonged for over two decades and the agreement was terminated by Apex Grievance Redressal Committee on Aug 4, 2021. SC not only dismissed the plea of the firm, but also imposed a cost of Rs 1 lakh payable to Supreme Court Mediation and Conciliation Project Committee. Justice Narasimha, writing a 43-page judgment, red-flagged the working of the law and concurred with the "exasperation" expressed by HC. Referring to National Judicial Data Grid data, the bench said it showed that 1,612 cases, involving disputes arising under the Act, are pending before HC. "Of these, 135 cases are more than 10 years old. In the last 20 years, 4,488 cases have been filed and disposed of under the said Act. Latest data from Bombay HC show that about 923 cases on the appellate side and 738 on the original side are pending adjudication. The Act is a beneficial legislation, intended to materialize the constitutional assurance of dignity of the individual by providing basic housing, so integral to human life. However, the propensity and the proclivity of the statute to generate litigation are worrisome," the bench said. The bench said HC's "exasperation" about working of the Act is "understandable". "The present appeal is a classic example of why HC's concern is genuine. It has been noticed that the statutory scheme is problematic with respect to identification and declaration of land as a slum. This problem involves an examination of the role of authorities in giving such recognition, insidious intervention of builders in the said process cast doubts on the independence and integrity in the decision-making process," it said. The SC said the process of identification of slum dwellers involved a "complicated process" of proof of such a status.

NHAI begins 100-crore makeover of 'dangerous' container road in Kochi infrastructure on the stretch despite collecting a hefty toll fee. "We've started the bridge repair works and other preliminary construction activities. The works like BC (bituminous concrete) overlay will be taken up only after the monsoon. Five per cent of the total construction activities have been completed. We aim to finish the entire work in a year," said P Pradeep, NHAI project director.

Initial rectification works such as fixing of guard stones, W-beam crash barrier, embankment and shoulder repairing have been completed. The boring of holes and concrete foundation laying for the installation of streetlights & mast lights with LED system, has been taken up on the entire stretch.

All 11 bridges on the stretch are being strengthened for smooth traffic flow by uplifting the deck. The activities also include replacement of bearings, and expansion joints, repairing of cracks/damage, and relaying of the bridge approach roads. Service roads covering a distance of 10.4 km will be taken up for improvements. A culvert is also being constructed to link the service road near Mulavukad. Similarly, the construction of a drainage for a length of 5.9 km has also

Backwardness is exceptional: Panel to Bombay HC on Maratha survey

MUMBAI. While justifying its recommendation for 10% reservation in education and govt jobs for Marathas, the Maharashtra State Commission for Backward Classes has told the Bombay high court there is "exceptional backwardness" among the community, which is "pushed to the dark edge of mainstream society" and "looked down upon" by the open category.

The Justice (retd) Sunil Shukre-headed commission replied to petitions that challenged its Feb 15 report before the high court. On July 10, a full bench of Chief Justice Devendra Kumar Upadhyaya and Justices Girish Kulkarni and Firdosh Pooniwalla directed the panel to file its reply.

The reply, filed by Asharani Patil, member-secretary, said the commission carried out a quantitative analysis of data regarding 1.58 crore households after extensive field surveys. It evaluated the data with previous committee reports and other reputed agencies. Its data set out the regression of the Maratha community in govt services and economic and social backwardness. There was decreasing representation in govt services, an increase in households below the poverty line and landlessness, worsening living conditions, caste and occupation-related inferiority, rising superstitious practices, women indignity, high suicide rates, and an alarming increase in child marriages.

The reply said the data clearly revealed societal reality. "These indicators together showed the deepening of social and economic backwardness of the Maratha community and that the Maratha community had been pushed to the dark edges of mainstream society that it can no longer be considered a part of the mainstream of society in any real sense of the term," it stated. Also, the above indicators were found to be "exceptional circumstances and extraordinary situations which would justify reservation for the Maratha community." The commission concluded that such "measure (reservation) would be a pathway for the community to overcome these exceptional and extraordinary challenges, ensuring equal opportunities in education, employment, and social upliftment, thereby contributing to their holistic development and integration into the mainstream of society." The commission had also analysed contemporaneous quantifiable data up to 2024 and found the Maratha community has a lower level of education vis-a-vis the open category. It had prepared 57 tables on the basis of its data to show the Maratha community "is socially and educationally backward." However, the petitioners have adopted a "pick and choose" approach and pointed to alleged defects, the panel said.

Verify records of caste cert recipients: HC

Kolkata. Calcutta High Court on Thursday directed the Malda sub-divisional officer to serve notice on three private respondents, asking them to come to the SDO office for verification of documents for the Scheduled Caste certificates issued to them.

A division bench of Chief Justice TS Sivagananam and Justice Hirannay Bhattacharyya passed the order after taking note that the Malda SDO and the Chanchal SDO had cancelled two SC certificates each, soon after the matter went to the HC.

The petitioner had alleged that caste certificates were issued to eight persons who didn't belong to the community. UP to use family IDs to issue caste and income certificates. The government simplified issuing income and caste certificates by leveraging the family ID system. If a family member possesses a certificate, others can obtain one by proving their relationship, bypassing lengthy verification. This streamlined process aims to save time and will be operational in August, pending application development by NIC, according to Alok Kumar, principal secretary, planning department.

Supreme Court allows sub-groups within 15% Scheduled Caste quota. The Supreme Court allowed states to sub-categorise Scheduled Castes based on socio-economic factors to ensure those most in need benefit from the 15% SC quota. The court mandated that the 'creamy layer' be excluded from this reservation. This decision overrides a 2004 ruling and aims to promote genuine equality under the Constitution. Madras High Court directs removal of community, caste names from government schools in Tamil Nadu. The Madras High Court directed the Tamil Nadu government to remove caste and community names from government school names statewide, following concerns of stigmatization. Highlighting that terms such as 'Tribal' in school names could negatively affect children's self-esteem, the court urged the Chief Secretary to initiate necessary actions, reflecting Tamil Nadu's commitment to social justice.

Gurgaon: Foreigner among two convicted in drug case

GURGAON. A city court has sentenced a Polish man and his accomplice - a resident of Himachal Pradesh - to 12 years of imprisonment for illegal possession of over 4.5kg of opium in 2019. Police said Patryk Dziwinski was arrested near Qutub Plaza Market with 345g of opium on May 26, 2019. His accomplice Qazi attempted to dump 4.3kg of opium upon noticing cops and fled. He was arrested later. A preliminary probe has revealed that Dziwinski did not have valid documents to stay in India at that time. "During initial investigation, Dziwinski failed to present a valid visa and passport to the authorities, which led to further complications as illegal possession of opium and hashish, coupled with lack of valid travel documents, warranted the registration of a case under the NDPS Act and the Foreigner Act," said a police officer. According to police, they gathered evidence and presented a strong case against the accused.

In her judgment, Judge Gagan Geet Kaur sentenced Dziwinski under the Foreigner Act to 4 years imprisonment and a fine of Rs 40,000. Under the NDPS Act, Dziwinski received a sentence of 5 years imprisonment and a fine of Rs 50,000. Meanwhile, the court sentenced Qazi under Section 20(b)(2)(C) of the NDPS Act. He received a 12-year imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1 lakh. Furthermore, under Section 29 of the NDPS Act, he received another 12 years of imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1 lakh.

Went out to buy pizza, 22-year-old BSc student, sister die after falling into drain in Faridabad

GURGAON: A 22-year-old BSc student, who was out to buy pizza along with his sister and brother-in-law, slipped into a drain in Faridabad's Mohana Road and drowned around 9pm on Wednesday. Prince's body was recovered around 10 hours later on Thursday morning after an extensive search by police and SDRF. Police said the drain next to the restaurant was flowing to capacity because of heavy downpour. In the dim light, Prince lost his footing, fell into it and was swept away by the currents, making rescue attempts by his brother-in-law and locals futile. Prince had stepped aside to relieve himself, while his brother-in-law and sister were getting the pizza packed. People gathered at the spot after hearing his brother-in-law's cries for help and alerted the police. Cops, other emergency services along with SDM (Ballabhgarh) Trilokchand arrived at the scene. During the search operation, a sewer worker located Prince's body, which was then sent for a post-mortem examination. Prince was from Sadikpur Bajna in UP's Mathura. His family had moved to Faridabad several years ago in search of better livelihood. "He was good at academics and was seen as a beacon of hope for his family's future," a relative of Prince said, adding that he was pursuing his graduation from Bhimrao Ambedkar University in Agra and was in Faridabad to be with sister, who had given birth to a child a week ago. Prince's uncle Rakesh Sharma alleged that even though cops were informed about the incident, they couldn't immediately start the search operation as divers didn't reach the spot on Wednesday night. "We waited till early morning for the SDRF team to reach the spot. Prince's body was found under a culvert, around 100m from the accident site," he said.

'Ready to work as a peon': A year on, Nuh riot victims' kin ask for govt jobs

GURGAON: Clad in a white kurta-pyjama for the havan, Anmol Saini (13) remembers how his father would frequently bring home sweets for the kids after returning from the shop in Nuh. Anmol, his demeanour too stoic for a teenager, is surrounded by his mother, siblings and other relatives as they perform the rituals to mark a year since Shakti became a victim of communal riots that erupted during a religious procession in Nuh on July 31, 2023.

The teenager says he is focusing on his studies to "become independent". His elder sister Khushi (15) has a similar goal. She wants to support her family financially and become a teacher. "I want to study. My father wanted us to study. I want to ensure that," Anmol says. Their uncle Sukhbir Singh (43) says justice for Shakti's death is delayed. "A year has passed since the arrests. Yet, legal proceedings are advancing at a sluggish pace. Most of the accused who were taken into custody have been released on bail. At this point, our only desire is for the justice system to be efficient and deliver timely verdicts," Sukhbir, Shakti's elder brother, says.

After the riots, 49 cases were filed in Nuh for rioting and 11 cases for provocative speeches and social media posts, leading to the arrest of 441 suspects. Currently, 405 of them have been released on bail. TOI reported on Thursday that the absence of a dedicated court for riot cases is among the reasons for slow progress. Proceedings have also been affected by the reluctance of witnesses to depose before courts as they fear for their safety.

Repaired in March, key link to Dwarka Expressway now riddled with craters in Gurgaon GURGAON. The connecting road which was repaired in March ahead of the Prime Minister's visit to inaugurate the Dwarka Expressway has once again fallen into disrepair following the torrential rain. The left-out portion, covering sectors 83, 84, and 36A and a crucial link for thousands of commuters, is in a shambles. The road was earlier part of Dwarka Expressway and later, with the change in alignment, was left out. The section was in a state of neglect for three years before it was quickly resurfaced in preparation for the PM's visit. However, showers have undone much of the repair work, resulting in the stretch now riddled with potholes and uneven surface. Residents have expressed their frustration, noting the rapid deterioration of the road which could not even withstand one monsoon. "We were relieved when the road was fixed, but it didn't even last five months.

Meanwhile, GMDA officials maintained

Numerous potholes and craters have again developed on the road. Such is the poor workmanship and construction material," Dinesh Garg, vice president of Gurgaon One RWA, said. The dilapidated condition of the road has made it accident-prone. Several incidents of vehicle damage and near-misses have been reported. "I've seen motorbikes lose control and fall dangerously to avoid the potholes. With flooded roads, it becomes difficult to gauge potholes and we have to dodge them constantly," Puran Singh, RWA president of SS Coralwood, said.

"If the civic authorities could fix the road in two days for a VIP visit, why can't they do the same now? It is clear that our concerns are not a priority. It shows that it's just the matter of their intent, otherwise they keep stretching the problem," Anupam Mishra, a resident of Sector 83, said.

that they have engaged a consultant for preparing a detailed project report of the stretch. "Once they submit the report, we will take the project further," Arun Dhankar, chief engineer of GMDA, said. Besides, another connecting road to Dwarka Expressway and Manesar is also painting a deteriorating picture with numerous potholes offering commuters a back-breaking ride. Dharavir Singh, RWA president of Mapsko Casabella, said, "The condition of many roads in our area has gone from bad to worse after the rains. This leads to traffic congestion. The main reason for road deterioration was the lack of a drainage system and the water stagnation makes it worse. Even the newly constructed Rampura-Pataudi Road near Hayatpur is heavily flooded and will soon start showing signs of damage. The GMDA must improve their functioning and address people's concerns promptly." Asked about other stretches in the area, GMDA said it has already invited bids for the road connecting Dwarka Expressway and Manesar. "At present, technical evaluation is underway for the redevelopment of this stretch. We hope to finish the process soon and submit the proposal for financial approval by the end of this month. Similarly, we have already planned to carry out special repairs of arterial roads in new sectors and hope to start the work soon," the chief engineer added.

710 fined Rs 4 lakh in a month for illegal dumping of garbage in Gurgaon

GURGAON. MCG has issued 710 challans and imposed fines amounting to Rs 4 lakh for illegal dumping of garbage on roadsides and public places in the last month. Most of these challans have been issued to shop owners and street vendors found dumping waste on roads, an official said on Thursday. Appealing to traders and street vendors to maintain cleanliness in their vicinity, MCG commissioner Narhari Singh Banger said, "MCG teams are issuing challans and recovering the fine amount on the spot. We need the vendors to cooperate by dumping their waste in the dustbins and not littering the roads. They can hand over this waste to the collectors or dump it in the tractor trolleys at the secondary waste collection points."

Further highlighting that garbage dumping in and around vegetable markets has been a major concern, commissioner Banger added, "Sadar Bazar has multiple heaps of garbage dumped by the traders and vendors on the roadsides."

These challans are being issued under the SWEEP, which was implemented given the "alarming" levels of untreated waste in the city. The Haryana govt declared a municipal solid waste exigency in Gurgaon on June 12 under Disaster Management Act, 2005. Under SWEEP, a control room has already been set up to address complaints about construction and demolition (C&D) waste, municipal solid waste, and horticulture garbage.

Classes go online in Gurgaon after Wednesday's heavy rain

GURGAON. Several schools in the city conducted online classes on Thursday after the downpour the previous day led to waterlogged streets. However, the blackout across sectors made it difficult to take the classes, residents alleged. Administrations of various schools said that one of the reasons to switch online for Thursday was IMD's heavy rain alert for Thursday besides the waterlogged streets. Working parents, meanwhile, raised concerns citing mismanagement by the civic authorities as well as school administrations. Sheetal Verma, mother of a primary class student at a private school in Sector 45, said, "We received communication from our daughter's school late at night that the classes will be conducted online. My husband and I are working so whenever school announces online classes, at least one of us stays back with her." Some parents also agreed that the incessant rain called for the last minute decision to ensure the safety of children, which could have been compromised if they had to commute. A spokesperson for Suncity School told TOI, "We had informed the parents well in time that the schools will remain closed and classes will be conducted virtually. After the pandemic, all schools have now learnt to manage the last minute call to shift to virtual mode."

Vladimir Putin receives Russians returning to Moscow after prisoner swap

Moscow. Russian nationals involved in a complex swap of prisoners with Western countries arrived in Moscow late on Thursday and were met at the airport by President Vladimir Putin, Russian news agencies reported.

The agencies quoted Putin as saying that the eight returnees would all be presented with state awards and that he told them that their homeland "had not forgotten them, not for a single minute". Also meeting the returnees, according to the agencies, were the head of the FSB intelligence service, Alexander Bortnikov, the head of the SVR foreign intelligence service, Sergei Naryshkin, and Defence Minister Andrei Belousov. The eight returnees included Vadim Krasikov, convicted by a German court of killing a Chechen dissident in Berlin, and two men convicted of cyber crimes in the United States, Vladislav Klyushin and Roman Seleznev.

US recognizes opposition candidate González as the winner of Venezuela's presidential election

CARACAS. The stakes grew higher for Venezuela's electoral authority to show proof backing its decision to declare President Nicolás Maduro the winner of the country's presidential election after the United States on Thursday recognized opposition candidate Edmundo González as the victor, discrediting the official results of the highly anticipated vote.

The U.S. announcement followed calls from multiple governments, including close allies of Maduro, for Venezuela's National Electoral Council to release detailed vote counts, as it has done during previous elections. The electoral body declared Maduro the winner Monday, but the main opposition coalition revealed hours later that it had evidence to the contrary in the form of more than two-thirds of the tally sheets that each electronic voting machine printed after polls closed. "Given the overwhelming evidence, it is clear to the United States and, most importantly, to the Venezuelan people that Edmundo González Urrutia won the most votes in Venezuela's July 28 presidential election," U.S. Secretary of State Antony Blinken said in a statement.

Maduro responded with a quick admonishment: "The United States needs to keep its nose out of Venezuela!"

The U.S. government announcement came amid diplomatic efforts to persuade Maduro to release vote tallies from the election and increasing calls for an independent review of the results, according to officials from Brazil and México. Government officials from Brazil, Colombia and Mexico have been in constant communication with Maduro's administration to convince him that he must show the vote tally sheets from Sunday's election and allow impartial verification, a Brazilian government official told The Associated Press Thursday.

Chinese parents install spy camera in 20-year-old daughter's bedroom, spark outcry on social media

World. Social media in China is in an uproar after a 20-year-old student went to the police because her parents put a surveillance camera in her bedroom, according to the South China Morning Post.

The student, identified only as Li, went to a police station in Beijing on July 26, seeking help after fleeing from her home in another province. Li, a second-year university student, revealed that her parents had installed a camera to monitor her every move. They reportedly became violent, hitting her and throwing her phone on the floor whenever she made mistakes.

Li explained that this extreme parenting style had caused her significant trauma and was driving her to seek independence. She planned to find part-time work in Beijing to support herself and escape her controlling parents. Concerned that her parents might report her missing and cause a commotion, Li went to the police to inform them of her situation and ensure her safety. Police officer Zhang Chuanbin reassured her, stating that her parents' approach was an inappropriate way to show care. Zhang contacted Li's parents and advised them to respect their adult child's need for personal space. Following this intervention, Li's parents agreed to remove the surveillance camera, and she subsequently returned home. However, the incident has sparked widespread condemnation online, with many criticizing the invasion of privacy.

"So horrible. Having no private space at all despite being 20," commented one user on Weibo. "Children are independent individuals, not parents' belongings – some Chinese parents should keep this in mind," said another.

"Even a prison respects people's privacy more than this," another person remarked.

Donald Trump loses appeal of gag order in hush money criminal case

The New York court's decision means that Trump cannot comment publicly about individual prosecutors and others in the case until Justice Juan Merchan sentences him on September 18, seven weeks before the November 5 election.

New York. A New York state appeals court on Thursday rejected Donald Trump's challenge to a gag order in his hush money criminal case, where the former US president was convicted in May on charges stemming from hush money paid to a porn star. The decision by the Appellate Division in Manhattan means the Republican presidential nominee cannot comment publicly about individual prosecutors and others in the case until Justice Juan Merchan sentences him on September 18, seven weeks before the November 5 election. Trump's lawyers have argued that the gag order violated Trump's constitutional free speech rights under the First Amendment. The gag order is blatantly un-American", Steven Cheung, a spokesperson for Trump's campaign, said in a statement.

A Reuters/Ipsos poll released on Tuesday showed Trump locked in a tight race with Vice President Kamala Harris, who is poised to become the Democratic nominee. Harris led Trump 43 per cent-42 per cent among registered voters, within the margin of error. On Thursday afternoon, Trump's lawyers renewed their demand that Merchan recuse himself, citing his daughter's work as a Democratic political consultant and her "long-standing" relationship with Harris. They also said the "unjust and unconstitutional" gag order restricts Trump's ability to respond to Harris, saying she framed her candidacy as that of "prosecutor vs convicted felon." Harris served as California's attorney general earlier in her career. Merchan rejected a similar recusal request by Trump before the trial began, and another recusal request last year. The judge imposed the gag order a few weeks before the trial began on April 22, saying

Trump's history of making threatening statements could undermine the proceedings. Merchan's original order prevented Trump from commenting on prosecutors, court staff, witnesses and jurors. A separate order against naming the anonymous jurors remains in effect. Merchan lifted the restrictions on witnesses and jurors following Trump's May 30 conviction. The Appellate Division, mid-level appeals court, said threats that Bragg's staff received in the wake of the verdict continue to pose a "significant and immediate" threat. Justice Merchan did not act in excess of jurisdiction by maintaining the narrowly tailored protections," the five-judge panel said. The appeals court upheld Merchan's original gag order in May, citing the need to protect people from "threats, intimidation, harassment, and harm," and rejecting Trump's First Amendment argument.

The order leaves Trump free to speak about Bragg and Merchan. Jurors found Trump guilty on 34 felony counts of falsifying business records, for covering up former personal lawyer and fixer Michael Cohen's $130,000 payment to adult film actress Stormy Daniels. The payment was made in exchange for Daniels' silence before the 2016 election about a sexual encounter she says she had with Trump a decade earlier, which Trump denied. Trump won the presidency by defeating Democrat Hillary Clinton. The criminal trial was the first of any US president. Trump faces up to four years in prison, and can also be fined.

Time behind bars is rare for people convicted in New York for falsifying business records, especially those like Trump with no prior criminal histories.

Hamas chief Haniyeh killed by bomb struck into guesthouse 2 months ago: Report

World. Top Hamas leader Ismail Haniyeh was assassinated by an explosive device covertly smuggled into the Tehran guesthouse where he was staying, the New York Times (NYT) reported, citing officials. The bomb had been hidden around two months before his stay.

Haniyeh had travelled to Iran's capital for the inauguration of President Masoud Paezeshkian. He was put up in a guesthouse run and protected by the Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps in an upscale neighbourhood of northern Tehran. He had often stayed at the guesthouse during visits to Tehran. Officials told NYT the bomb was detonated remotely once it was confirmed that he was inside his room at the guesthouse, killing him and a bodyguard. The explosion shook the building, shattered some windows, and caused the partial collapse of an exterior wall. In the immediate aftermath, speculation centred on the possibility of an Israeli missile strike, but the operation exploited a security lapse that allowed the bomb to be planted and remain hidden for weeks. While Israel has not publicly taken responsibility for the killing, NYT reported that Israeli intelligence officials briefed the United States and other Western governments on the details of the operation. The United States, however, denied receiving advance knowledge of the assassination plot, according to Secretary of State Antony Blinken.

A public funeral ceremony for Haniyeh was held in Tehran on Thursday, with crowds of mourners paying their respects. Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei led prayers for Haniyeh, having earlier threatened "harsh punishment" for his killing. Qatar is set to hold funeral ceremonies for Haniyeh on Friday, with Arab and Islamic leaders as well as representatives of other Palestinian factions and members of the public expected to attend, reported AFP. The assassination came just hours after Israel conducted an airstrike in Lebanon's Beirut, killing Fuad Shukr, a military commander of Hezbollah, a Hamas ally.

US continues to expect accountability from India on Pannu assassination bid WASHINGTON. The United States continues to expect accountability from India concerning the alleged role of an Indian government employee in the failed attempt to assassinate an American citizen on US soil last summer, an official said. We continue to expect accountability from the government of India in relation to the alleged role of an Indian government employee in the failed attempt to assassinate a US citizen on US soil that occurred last summer,? State Department Deputy Spokesperson Vedant Patel told reporters at his daily news conference. We continue to raise our concerns directly with the Indian government at senior levels, he said.

Patel, however, declined to comment on a news report alleging that Canadian authorities claim to have arrested five Indian nationals planning to target a Sikh separatist at a wedding ceremony.

"As it relates to the news that you mentioned out of Canada, I would refer you to the Canadian government to comment on issues that are happening within their law enforcement system," the official said. We continue to raise our concerns directly with the Indian government at senior levels, he added. In November last year, US federal prosecutors charged Indian national Nikhil Gupta with working with an Indian government employee in the foiled plot to kill Gurpatwant Singh Pannu in New York. Gupta, who was arrested in the Czech Republic in June last year, was extradited to the US on June 14.

Biden credits allies for prisoner swap with Russia: Why it's vital to have friends

Joe Biden called the multinational prisoner swap deal "a powerful example of why it's vital to have friends in this world."

World. The US President shared an image with the families of Evan Gershkovich, Paul Whelan and Alsu Kurmashev and Vladimir Kara-Murza standing inside the Oval Office. All four have been released by Russia as part of the prisoner swap deal. "Today, I stood beside the families of Paul, Evan, Alsu, and Vladimir in the Oval Office as they spoke to their loved ones for the first time since they regained freedom. These families never lost hope.

And today, they'll each be reunited with the missing piece of their soul," Biden tweeted. Evan Gershkovich is a Wall Street Journal (WSJ) reporter who was arrested by Russia last March on espionage charges. Former US Marine Paul Whelan was arrested in Moscow in 2018 on espionage charges. Russian-American journalist Alsu Kurmasheva was accused of spreading false information about the Russian military. Vladimir Kara-Murza, an outspoken critic of Russia's war in Ukraine, was sentenced to 25 years in 2023. He holds dual citizenship of Britain and Russia.

US national security advisor Jake Sullivan said that no money was exchanged as part of the biggest East-West prisoner exchange since the end of the Cold War. He added that no sanctions were loosened to facilitate the deal. The landmark prisoner swap agreed by Russia, the United States and several of its allies that freed 16 people was more than two years in the making, involving secret talks and complex diplomacy involving Germany, Russia and the US, a Reuters report mentioned.

Welcome home: Biden greets Evan Gershkovich, others freed in Russia prisoner swap World. A plane carrying three freed Americans, including journalist Evan Gershkovich and former US Marine Paul Whelan, landed at Joint Base Andrews in Maryland late on Thursday as part of a massive prisoner exchange deal involving multiple nations, which saw 26 prisoners being released.

Gershkovich, Whelan and Russian-American journalist Alsu Kurmasheva were freed on Thursday by Russia as part of the biggest prisoner swap since the end of the Cold War. All three American detainees were warmly welcomed and received by US President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris. They were also greeted and hugged by families who had tears of joy and relief as they saw them after a long time. "Welcome home," Biden told the released detainees. According to the White House, the US had negotiated the prisoner swap with Russia, Germany and three other countries. The agreement, negotiated in secrecy in Turkey's Ankara for over a year, had 26 prisoners, including 16 of those coming to the West from Russia and eight being sent back to Russia from the West. The families of the released detainees had an emotional moment at the Oval Office as they spoke to their loved ones by phone. In a brief conversation, Biden told the three Americans that they were detained "wrongfully" and "we were overwhelmed" that they returned home.

"We just want to say how overwhelmed we are. You've been wrongfully detained for a long time, and we are glad you are home," Biden told the released detainees as the families stood around the presidential Resolute Desk. "Every parent, child, spouse and loved one who joined me in the Oval Office today has been praying for this day for a long time," he said. In an emotional conversation, the mother of Gershkovich, a Wall Street Journal reporter based in Russia, told her son over the phone that it was her speaking. "This is momma. Do you hear me? It's your mom," Gershkovich's mother told her son over the phone. The entire moment was captured in a two-minute video posted on the X handle of Biden's office. Gershkovich was arrested in March last year on espionage charges, which he and the US government vehemently denied. He was subsequently sentenced to 16 years in a high-security Russian prison. Whelan, a former Marine who was working as a corporate security executive from Michigan, was detained in Moscow in 2018 and convicted on espionage charges. He has been serving a 16-year sentence in a Russian prison. Whelan and the US government have denied that he is a spy, and Washington has designated him as "wrongfully detained". Kurmasheva, an editor with Radio Free Europe-Radio Liberty (RFE/RL), a media organisation funded by the US government, travelled to Russia in May last year to meet her mother. However, she was temporarily detained by Russian authorities while waiting for her return flight and her dual US and Russian passports were confiscated, USA Today reported. The 47-year-old was initially fined for failing to register her US passport with Russian authorities. However, she was arrested and charged in October for "failing to register herself as a foreign agent."

Why this helplessness? HC raps Maharashtra for failure to act against illegal hawkers

MUMBAI. The Bombay High Court on Thursday rebuked the Maharashtra government for failing to fully implement the provisions of an Act against unauthorised hawkers and instead getting into a blame game with the Mumbai civic body while citizens continue to suffer. Expressing dismay over non-execution of its orders passed from time to time, the HC cautioned that if forced, then it would not shy away from exercising contempt jurisdiction.

A division bench pointed out that state authorities have failed to implement the provisions of the Street Vendors Act, introduced 10 years ago, even as citizens continue to suffer the menace of unauthorised hawkers and vendors on public roads in the metropolis.

The bench of Justices M S Sonak and Kamal Khata said it was "unfortunate and sad" that the government has not implemented a Parliamentary enactment since 2014, but was instead getting into a blame game with the Brihanmumbai Municipal Corporation (BMC) over non-cooperation.

"It is very unfortunate and sad that not only is the law not implemented, but even our orders passed from time to time are not followed," the court noted. "Why this helplessness? The state government says the BMC is not helping... the BMC will blame someone else. Everyone is suffering... Give us an answer as to how you are going to reduce the problem of the common person till such time your scheme is not in place," the court asked.

FIR as NCP (SP) MLA Awhad's car attacked in Mumbai 'over remark on Sambhajiraje'; neta detained MUMBAI/THANE. NCP (SP) MLA Jitendra Awhad's vehicle was attacked by around 5-6 people on Thursday over his remarks against former Rajya Sabha MP Sambhajiraje Chhatrapati. The incident took place on P D'Mello Road, near the Eastern Freeway.

The men who attacked Awhad's car with sticks and broke the rear window glass fled after the police personnel from Awhad's escort car got down and chased them. The attackers were shouting "Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Ki Jai."

Nitin Deshmukh, spokesperson for NCP (SP), lodged an FIR with the Dongri police. Deshmukh, in his complaint, stated that he saw in a video that Ankush Kadam, a functionary of Swaraj Sanghatna, was gesturing some men to attack. He further stated in the FIR that through the media, he learnt that Dhananjay Jadhav, a functionary of Swaraj Sanghatna, said that the Swaraj Sanghatna claimed responsibility for the attack. Kadam and Jadhav have been named in the FIR. Police registered the case against the accused for wrongful restraint, unlawful assembly, criminal conspiracy, rioting, etc., of the BNS. The Pune city crime branch officials on Thursday evening detained the spokesperson of a political party allegedly involved in the attack. Pune police handed over the custody of the spokesperson to Mumbai police later in the night. The attacks were likely provoked by Awhad's recent remarks holding Sambhajiraje Chhatrapati accountable for instigating violence in a few villages following the demolition of some religious structures in Kolhapur last month.

Inter student dies by suicide at hostel room in Hanumakonda

Hanumakonda. An intermediate first-year student died by suicide at a college hostel in Nakalagutta of Hanumakonda. Though the incident took place on Wednesday night, she died while undergoing treatment at a hospital in the wee hours of Thursday.

The deceased was identified as A Bhavani Reddy, a resident of Kamalapur village in Mangapet Mandal of Mulugu district. She was pursuing an intermediate first-year MPC course at a private junior college in Hanumakonda. According to information, the deceased had gone home from July 14-21 as she was unwell. She returned to the hostel on July 22 and started attending classes in the college regularly. Her roommates observed that Bhavani was in depression after returning from home. When they questioned her, she told them that her parents inquired about internal exam results and warned her to secure good results in the examinations.

On Wednesday night, Bhavani took this extreme step in her hostel room while her roommates had gone out for dinner. She was immediately rushed to a private hospital where she died on Thursday morning.

On learning of the incident, Bhavani's parents rushed to the college and staged a protest with their relatives. They damaged furniture and broke windows in the college. The police reached the spot and shifted the body to MGM Hospital, Warangal. A 35-member OISF unit comprising one inspector, four sub-inspectors and 30 constables has been deployed in the zoo and the botanical garden.

BHUBANESWAR. The Odisha Industrial Security Force (OISF) has taken charge of the security of Nandankanan Zoological Park here. A 35-member OISF unit comprising one inspector, four sub-inspectors and 30 constables has been deployed in the zoo and the botanical garden.

The transfer of park security from local police and forest guards to OISF has been made in view of rising breaches and disturbances created by miscreants in the zoo.

The Forest department decided to enhance the safety and security of zoo after two officials and staff were assaulted by armed anti-socials in April this year. The anti-socials, brandishing sharp weapons, created havoc on the office premises, punching and slapping defenceless officials and breaking mobile phones, electronic items and other furniture. The PCR van contacted for assistance allegedly stayed put outside the zoo premises raising serious question on the protection measures in place for the park officials and staff.

"The enhanced security by posting OISF personnel will not only curb anti-social incursions but also help in better zoo management and crowd control. An MoU between Nandankanan and OISF was signed on Monday," said an official.

Meanwhile, in another development, the zoo lost a tiger cub born to white tigress Mousumi. The tigress gave birth to two stillborn and one cub on July 29. However, born prematurely, the cub was abandoned by the mother.

BDA should fix allottees' issues: BJP MLA Suresh Kumar

BENGALURU. With the Bangalore Development Authority (BDA) gearing up to invite applications for the allotment of plots in Dr Shivaram Karanth Layout, former minister and BJP leader Suresh Kumar on Thursday said the agency "should first allot sites in Shivaram Karanth Layout to BDA's site allotment victims".

"I noticed through the media that BDA is gearing up to invite applications from citizens for allotment of plots. I would like to draw your attention to the issue of plot allotment in Banashankari 6th Stage Layout, which is Turahalli forest area. It was a designated forest buffer zone about 20 years ago in 2003-2004, and today more than 1,500 site allottees have not been able to construct their houses because of the standoff between the forest department and BDA," he said. "The BDA and forest department have not been able to discuss and come to an agreement on the ownership of the land."

He said that similarly, owners of more than 5,000 plots in BDA layouts like Banashankari 6th Stage, Arkavathy Layout, Visvesvaraya Layout and Anjanapura are unable to construct houses as they are not in actual possession of their land. Complete pending projects soon, BDA told BDA chairman NA Haris on Thursday inspected the BDA villa project at Hunnigere. He called for its timely completion. A release said, "The chairman inspected the villas. He asked the Authority to develop the garden, swimming pool and club house in a much better manner." Haris also inspected common amenities sites at Dasarahalli, besides the Malleswaram market and ordered completion of the floor and the parking lot within a month.

Rlys told to pay 2L to retd employee

Bengaluru. Denied reimbursement of the cost he had incurred for his late wife's ovarian cancer surgery and treatment under a scheme floated by his employer, a 61-year-old man approached a consumer court. The court recently directed the railways to clear the retired employee's claims as per rules, along with over Rs 2.2 lakh for deficient service and litigation cost of Rs 25,000.

Ramprasad, 61, from Davanagere alleged that he'd spent nearly Rs 41 lakh for his wife Bhavani's treatment, asserting that negligence and delay by the authorities in settling his reimbursement claims under the Railway Employees' Liberalized Health Scheme (RELHS) caused him financial and mental distress. Bhavani was initially treated at a hospital in Davanagere for uterine-related ailment. She was later diagnosed with ovarian cancer at another hospital in Davanagere. Due to the advanced stage of her cancer, she was referred to a Bengaluru hospital, where she received chemotherapy and treatment for four months, until her demise on March 8, 2017.

Ramprasad submitted his claim for reimbursement on May 4, 2017, and allegedly got evasive reasons in reply, following which he approached Karnataka State Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission.

Railways argued before the commission that Ramprasad was not eligible for reimbursement under RELHS as the treatment wasn't conducted in a govt or philanthropic hospital, nor was it an emergency as defined by the scheme. They added Ramprasad hadn't sought prior approval from railways' medical authorities before opting for private healthcare.

The commission noted Ramprasad's 32-year service with the railways without any remark and the chronic and critical nature of his wife's illness. The judgment acknowledged that while RELHS has specific guidelines, the emergency nature of the cancer warranted immediate and specialised treatment, which justified seeking private healthcare.

Inaccessible public spaces for differently-abled

KOCHI. For Sivan Sukumaran, the journey from the entrance of the Thiruvananthapuram Central railway station to the platform is one fraught with challenges. "The fear is not one induced by my visual impairment. Instead, of having to depend on others. Especially for me, who has been trained to do all my work without assistance," says Sivan.

For Hima Manukumar, the difficulty is in navigating the steep rises and descends on her electric wheelchair, especially when boarding a train. "I would need at least four people to help me onto the train. The width of the coach door is also an impediment. In addition, the ramp facilities at the station are awkward. The incline does not allow us to use the ramp effectively. The condition of the toilet facilities is best left unsaid," Hima says. According to Section 40 of the Right of Persons with Disabilities (RPWD) Act 2021, the Union government has laid down standards of accessibility for movement, transportation, information and communication for persons with disabilities in rural and urban areas. Under these rules, formulated as 'Harmonised Guidelines and Space Standards for Universal Accessibility in India 2021', several initiatives have been taken up such as the 'Accessible India campaign'. Universal accessibility is also underlined while revamping city infrastructure as per initiatives such as the Smart City projects, in which Thiruvananthapuram finds a place.

Yet, the city's accessibility quotient is low despite the state government's ambitious Barrier-Free Kerala claims, says Krishnakumar P S of Mobility in Dystrophy (MIND). The forum has drawn up a report that will soon be presented to the district collector flagging the glaring need for the city to make public places inclusive enough to be accessible by persons with disabilities. Isolating experiences

"It is not that there are no ramps in public places or transport facilities. But can they be accessed by us is the question," asks Hima. "We had some KSRTC Volvo buses earlier which had ramp facility, but that's nowhere to be seen now. In panchayat offices, we have ramps that are either not aligned to the ground properly or at an incline that's not accessible with our wheelchairs," she points out. "There are some private facilities like hospitals and shopping malls which are better off," she says, adding, "What about government hospitals, schools, colleges, even roads and parks?" Such a state of affairs, she says, isolates persons with disabilities from the larger society.

In December, Hima had even gone to the Nava Kerala Sadas to put forward these issues before the chief minister. "Despite all that, the situation remains the same," she says.

It reeks of government inefficiency, says Justice S H Panchapakesan, the former state commissioner for persons with disabilities. "As per the Accessible India campaign, the Union government had kept a five-year deadline in 2017 for states to achieve universal accessibility. Kerala has not even completed 5 per cent of the work," he says.

Though Kerala asked for an extension, the Union government had made it clear that extensions would only be given to those states that are nearing the completion of the required work. "It gave an extension to Tamil Nadu because 85 per cent of the work was done. The situation in other south Indian cities such as Bengaluru and Hyderabad are far better," he adds.

Barrier-Free project

The Barrier-Free Kerala project, which precedes the RPWD Act as well as the Accessible India campaign in its launch, had embarked on several projects for the capital which was moving in fits and starts. Today, it's on a standstill, Panchapakesan says. "The RPWD Act also has very stringent statutes concerning the facilities in buildings. If violated, the fine could be anywhere between Rs 10,000 to Rs 5 lakh," the former commissioner says.

Plugs & scorers find new market on Reddit site for their 'high stuff' either students or young professionals - all in them in their 20s. One 1,200-member-strong community by the name "r/HyderabadEnts", for instance, had put out a direct message on its homepage: This is mainly created to give news about weed in Hyderabad, since people who are trying to "score" are being trapped by cops.

There were other individuals as well, ready to cut deals with anybody looking for a 'high'. One user, @Shoddy_Compte, 195, posted pictures of weed and wrote in the caption 'DM'.

His post sparked a flurry of comments with one user writing: "Please help me find the score near SR Nagar" even as another asked, "Where to get weed near ECIL." On a different thread, a post read: "Hello, I am anyone please help me out in scoring? I am new to Hyd. From what I've experienced, going to pan shops and autowallas doesn't help, and people are pretty hush-hush about it. Please help a brother out." wrote the user with the handle @Overall-Boot.

Dozens of others flooded these threads with similar queries.

Buzz in underground market attracts scammers, posts warn potential buyers

And every dealer appeared to follow the same MO: Identify the buyer, invite the person to a private chat (either on Reddit or Telegram), discuss the price and seal the deal. While most buyers on this platform were found asking for a 'drop' in locations along the IT corridor - Hi-Tec City, Gachibowli and even Jubilee Hills -- there were some requesting for the stuff to be shipped to Dilsukhnagar, Begumpet, Secunderabad as well. There were pick-up services available too.

Such is the rush that even posts from as long as four years ago, were found getting traction. "DM me for some G in Hyderabad. Good greens and cash on delivery," wrote one of the 'plugs' @strictlystreetG while another Redditor @Boring-Ad-5166 was seen redirecting buyers to Telegram and Instagram to connect with local drug dealers.

"IG: Hyderabad_green_weed. All over Hyderabad green available. DM him for stuff," the user posted. Meanwhile, the buzz on this underground market has started attracting scammers. Many of those active on the platform were seen tagging IDs of fraudulent dealers. "GUYS BEWARE!! This guy is a scammer."

Rainwater harvesting to overcome water scarcity

Nationally and internationally, 2023 is an important year for the water-related goals. The United Nations (UN) adopted a resolution in 2017, declaring 2018-28 as the International Decade for Action on Water for Sustainable Development. Water is an important resource for the development of any society and is helpful to maintain the integrity of the ecosystems. It is a critical resource for the growth of any economy. Water management is very essential to get the food security and prevent the soil erosion. It has been observed that demand of water has been increased almost eightfold in the last 100 years. There is availability of about 1,400 Million Cu. Kilometers of water in the world but only 0.003 per cent of this can be used for the hygiene, drinking, agriculture and industry. But all this water is not accessible because part of it flows through in the rivers during the seasonal floods. The average annual rainfall overland is 1,10,000 Km³, but about 70,000 Km³ evaporate before reaching to the sea. The remaining 40,000 Km³ is available for human use but two-thirds of it run off in floods. About 60 per cent area in India is still rain fed so the monsoon rains play a significant role in India. Global population is increasing at an alarming rate whereas the natural resources such as land and water are static. The world may face 40 per cent shortfall between forecast demand and available supply of water by 2030. It has been observed that the global water withdrawal grew 1.7 times faster than the population. Climate change may worsen the situation by increasing the frequency and intensity of floods and droughts, making water more unpredictable by altering hydrological cycles.

About 80 per cent of land is rain fed in the world and this land contributes about 60 per cent of food production. Rest 20 per cent comes under irrigated agriculture which contributes about 40 per cent of food production. It brings the self-sufficiency in the developing nations across the globe. The complexity of problems in rain fed agriculture is greater than that of irrigated agriculture. In India about 127 million ha cultivable land comes under rain fed condition which is approximately 70 per cent of the total cultivated land. Agriculture is the largest consumer of freshwater and during the last 30 years food production has been increased by 100 per cent. Over 1 billion people across the world are involved in agriculture. And they generate about $ 2.4 trillion in economic every year. Thus the importance of rainwater harvesting is increasing over the years. In India huge amount of budget is being invested on rainwater harvesting to mitigate the climate risks. Cost-effective technologies and an in-depth analysis on rain water management are needed for the sustainable agriculture. There is need to adopt alternative food crops and irrigation practices for sustainable agriculture. Millets can be promoted under rain fed agricultural system as they can be grown with less water. Rainwater is recognized as the viable alternative to mitigate the demand of washing, sanitation and crop irrigation. It is also helpful to mitigate the demand of droughts. It will give the food security and reduce the impact on humans and environment. During rainfall 70 per cent of annual ground water is contributed by the states such as Kerala, Madhya Pradesh, Mizoram, Meghalaya, Gujarat etc. There is 61 per cent contribution of recharge rainfall both from the monsoon and non-monsoon to the country's to the country's total annual groundwater and the remaining 39 per cent recharge comes from other sources such as recharge from tanks, canal seepage, ponds and water conservation structures.

Monsoon plays a significant role in the Indian agriculture as the major sown part of the country is still rain fed. The summer monsoon accounts for 70 to 80 per cent of the annual rainfall over the major parts of the South Asia. Timely rainfall is important for the Kharif season crops. Coastal areas of the country such as Tamil Nadu receive the much of the rainfall from the North-East Monsoons, between October and December. Average rainfall in India is 1183 mm out of which 75 per cent is received during the monsoon period i.e. July to September.

International law refers to the body of legislation that governs relations between States. International conflict resolution is the process of controlling or settling disputes between nations so they can each pursue their own objectives, whether they be collective or personal. States are acknowledged as the actors within the legal system by the framework provided by international law. It describes what they have to do to treat people living inside their borders and how they should interact with one other. These duties cover a wide range of topics, including the use of force, behavior during hostilities, immigration and refugee concerns, international criminal activity, disarmament initiatives, and prisoner care.

International law also regulates space operations, international commerce laws, global communication networks, sustainable development strategies for the oceans, and the environment. A treaty is an international agreement signed between States that is subject to international law, regardless of whether it is included in a single document, two or more related instruments, or known by another name. Treaty law, also referred to as the law of international agreements, governs the creation, interpretation, modification, and termination of treaties. The law of treaties, a pillar of international law, is essential for fostering mutual understanding and amicable conflict settlement.

PEACEFUL DISPUTE RESOLUTION

The foundation of Pacific dispute settlement is the idea that, while it can certainly be used for other objectives like status-seeking and fear-mongering, war is essentially a tool for resolving disagreements. Additional presumptions include the idea that a lack of understanding among decision-makers about the possibility of peacefully resolving issues to the mutual benefit of both sides—a lack of awareness stemming from pride, ignorance, a lack of imagination, or self-centered and cynical leadership—often leads to war. Thus, by conceiving and institutionalizing alternative, peaceful conflict resolution procedures and convincing the nations to employ them, international organizations may be able to help prevent wars. The International Criminal Court is one of the most significant mechanisms (ICC). The International Criminal Court (ICC) is a permanent court that was created to try people for the most heinous crimes that affect the entire world, like crimes against humanity, war crimes, and genocide. When it comes to encouraging responsibility and making sure victims of human rights atrocities receive justice, the ICC has been instrumental. A peace strategy known as “collective security” entails an agreement amongst governments to take joint action against any state deemed to be an aggressor. It focuses on preventing violence by using an overwhelming international force against any aggressor, putting aside issues with resolving conflicts, upholding the law, or ensuring justice. Even though collective security was a major component of both the League of Nations Covenant and the United Nations Charter, albeit in slightly diplomatic initiatives and the deployment of peacekeeping troops, has helped to keep local crises under control and avoid escalation, particularly when the superpowers are involved. Second, although not having any legal power behind them, the General Assembly has grown in importance as a key player in the process of what has been dubbed the communal legitimization of state programs. A state's likelihood of receiving universal censure increases the cost of resorting to war. Furthermore, states could not be expected to refrain from going to war in order to further an interest they believed to be truly necessary despite the assembly's rejection.

INTERNATIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS

International law also encourages the protection of human rights. The United Nations General Assembly adopted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948, which is a seminal document outlining each and every person's fundamental rights and freedoms. International law has created a number of procedures to guarantee the protection of human rights because it understands how important they are.

Globally, human rights advocacy and protection are greatly aided by international law. It lays out the rights and freedoms to which every person is entitled and offers a framework for holding states accountable for how they treat people living under their control. The relationship between human rights and international law is intricate and multidimensional, involving numerous organizations, treaties, and conventions aimed at preserving human dignity. This paper explores the complexities of this relationship by examining important elements, historical trends, obstacles, and the influence of international human rights law on international justice.

HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS LAW

The genesis of international human rights law can be found in the wake of World War II, which saw previously unheard-of atrocities and a worldwide resolve to stop them from happening again. A turning point in this process was the United Nations General Assembly's 1948 ratification of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR).

different forms, it was an utter failure in both instances. The idea behind disarmament and weaponry limitation is that states have a natural tendency to want to outgun any prospective competitors and that this leads to arms races that ultimately result in conflict. This theory's main flaw is that it frequently tends to mix up cause and effect. Even though arms races gain speed on their own, political tensions that escalate into conflict are what cause them. To put it briefly, tensions rather than armaments contests are what lead to conflict. To believe differently would be to confuse a symptom with the cause. As a result, lowering weaponry levels does not always result in lowering tensions.

CONFLICT REDUCTION

Due to the lack of success with these key peace initiatives outlined in its Charter, the UN has created two new processes designed to reduce the number of wars. First, “preventive diplomacy,” which mostly consists of the secretary-general's

Wayanad calamity

Landslides expose lapses on ecological front

A massive rescue operation is in progress in Kerala's Wayanad district, which has been ravaged by a series of landslides triggered by heavy rain. The death toll has crossed 150, even as the immediate priority is to evacuate and rehabilitate as many people as possible. Though it is being conveniently described as a natural calamity, the impact of factors such as climate change, an eco-sensitive terrain and the loss of forest cover cannot be discounted. As per the landslide atlas released by the Indian Space Research Organisation's National Remote Sensing Centre last year, 10 out of the 30 most landslide-prone districts in India are in Kerala, with Wayanad ranked 13th. According to a 2021 study, all landslide hotspots in Kerala are in the Western Ghats region, concentrated in Idukki, Ernakulam, Kottayam, Wayanad, Kozhikode and Malappuram districts. Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha and former Wayanad MP Rahul Gandhi has asked the Central Government to prepare an action plan to address the growing frequency of natural disasters in the ecologically fragile region of the Western Ghats. No less important is the need to assess the preparedness of various states and work out ways to make them better equipped to handle such catastrophes. The loss of lives and property can be minimised through an efficient early warning system, which doesn't seem to have happened in Kerala's case. India's approach to disaster management has improved from reactive to proactive as well as pre-emptive in recent years, but there are still some gaps to be plugged. A major stumbling block is the unwillingness of state governments, industries and local communities to pay heed to experts' warnings about the ramifications of infrastructure development and promotion of tourism in ecologically sensitive zones. As the nation extends support to a battered Wayanad.

Havoc on Ecology and Economy: Small Hydro-power Project Branwar and Broken Vows

and Kutbal as well. During winters people get mere 4 to 5 hours of power supply and when it snows, power supply is interrupted for weeks. No new electric cables, transformers or iron pylons have been erected. Lot of electricity transmission loss is taking place and locals have to pay for these losses as well. Even after a drizzle, power supply is cut in most of the villages in this remote area of Budgam which comes under the Surasyar block. Recently, when I visited Mechi Khanain meadow, trekking 12 kms up Branwar, I found the old course of Doodh Ganga dry. This was the area I along with my friends would catch fresh trout but that is now a history. From Mechi Khanain downstream to Branwar, the Doodh Ganga is almost dry. A little water joins it around Yusmar from the Kalnag stream but that is very little. From Mechi Khanain to Frasnag and downstream 2 kms this waterbody is completely dry now and everything in this stream has perished.

Hundreds of Trees axed in Branwar forest

The private company which got the project on a 40-year lease only destroyed the local forest landscape and biodiversity with the support of the then Government especially the Forest department. After 15 years, locals of Branwar and adjoining villages say that it seems that hundreds and thousands of forest trees (Kail, Fir, Deodar) were axed to help this company. On the other hand, the local people who actually own these forests under the Forest Rights Act 2006 got nothing in return. Not only were the trees in Branwar forest uprooted and axed but even the course of Doodh Ganga was changed which not only impacted the aquatic life but also continues to impact the forest cover even after 15 years.

Green Meadow dredged

The pristine and green meadow around Metch Khanain 12 kms up Branwar was dug with huge JCBs to create an artificial canal for diverting Doodh Ganga waters. A small water reservoir was created and a huge pipeline was laid through another green meadow called Haijan. JCB cranes, trucks and lorries went into deep jungle which was virgin until 2008-2009. The massive pipeline was laid over the green meadow of Haijan which is like a massive scar on its landscape and beauty. Trees were axed to make the canal in deep forest and trees which are there on the embankments of this artificial canal continue to get impacted with water. No concrete embankments or stone pitching was done to prevent oozing of water from the canal towards surrounding forest and trees.

Misleading information on UNFCCC

There is hardly any detailed information available on Govt websites in J&K about the Branawar 7.5 MW small hydropower project. After surfing the internet, I found a document related to this project called Clean Development Mechanism (CDM) on the website of United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC). The UNFCCC is the UN process for negotiating an agreement to limit dangerous climate change. It is an international treaty among countries to combat “dangerous” human interference with the climate system. The CDM allows emission-reduction projects in developing countries to earn certified emission reduction (CER) credits, each equivalent to one tonne of CO₂. These CERs can be traded and sold, and used by industrialized countries to meet a part of their emission reduction targets under the Kyoto Protocol. Under the Kyoto Protocol it is required that countries limit or reduce their greenhouse gas emissions by setting such targets. It also helps countries meet their emission targets, and to encourage the private sector and developing countries to contribute to emission reduction efforts, negotiators of the Protocol included three market-based mechanisms – emissions trading, the clean development mechanism (CDM) and joint implementation.

Improve Your business presentation skills

Making a presentation can give anyone jitters, more so, when you are asked to pitch your products and services to potential client and customers. In most corporate cases, the content presented is usually well researched. However, lack of presentation skills spoil the deal. The mantra here is: Presentation skills are just as important as the information collected. Here are six reminders that will help you present better: Know your audience. While preparing a business presentation, the most important thing to be kept in mind is who the 'target audience' will be. Find out everything you can about the audience - their age group, interests, profiles, and what they expect from your presentation. Frame the presentation as though you were a part of the audience. Once you know the audience, you can sell the benefits of your idea smartly.

Extensive research, detailed knowledge and a clear thought process will help you to present better. Confidence matters.

A butterfly in one's stomach is no excuse of getting away with a bad presentation. Consider a presentation as a formal conversation. When on a mission to sell, do not try to use fancy language, for that complicates things for you as well as the audience. Speak about the product, service or business idea, instead of introducing yourself. Do not read from a text. When doing so, make sure you have read the text multiple times to understand better. "No one will ever want to listen to a non-confident speaker. His/ her confidence levels are apparent in the usage of words and effective body language. So, plan well," suggests Radhi Nair, corporate trainer. The best way to improve confidence levels is to stand in front of a mirror or a group of people and speak about various issues and interests. Always remember, the better you know your content and aim, the less nervous you will be. Limit the use of Bombarding the audience with slides full of text is the biggest mistake a presenter can make. Unless absolutely necessary, avoid the use of large text paragraphs. Excess of text will confuse you as well as the audience. Instead, illustrate key points, use visuals and charts, and provide bullet points wherever necessary. Hand over a detailed printed copy of the presentation to the audience. The audience always prefers listening, than reading and writing. Keep check of your language when you script the presentation. Backing this thought, Nair says, "Language is the only nonambiguous medium of communication and exchanging ideas, and hence is of paramount significance." Time it right

While scripting and presenting a business idea is manageable, timing the presentation is where the challenge lies. The audience has a short attention span. Keeping this in mind, we cannot miss out on presenting important information. So the challenge is to deliver all the information tactfully, within the given time frame. With time, one must learn to modify the time limit of the presentation last minute. Keep the end in mind

Introduce the presentation with a short brief. Let the audience know what to expect. The audience believes in profit and benefit, and not continuous promises and commitments. "Deliver what you promise. Track record of some of the most successful companies. They live up to customers/ consumers promises. If you don't deliver what you promise they will move on--they have plenty of choices," quips Nair. At the end of your presentation, ask for audience feedback. Post the formal question answer session, stick around the venue for an hour prepared for a 30 minute presentation, know the content so well that you can cut it down to 15 minutes without missing on important points. Explains Nair, "Time management is an all time premium. In business communication, we believe in KISS - Keep It Short and Straight." Always remember, a good presentation is never a stroke of luck. It requires a lot of hard work, research and timeliness.

Business presentation skills are just as important as the content of the presentation.
Anishaa Sahijwala lists down reminders that will help you develop your skills.

13 children 'mysteriously' die in 20 days at Delhi shelter home

The cause of the deaths at Asha Kiran shelter home in Rohini is not known yet. A report by the SDM has raised questions about the quality of drinking water.

New Delhi: An investigation by a sub divisional magistrate has found that 13 children have died at a Delhi government-run shelter home for the specially abled in the past 20 days. So far, 27 deaths have been reported since January at the Asha Kiran shelter home in Rohini, inviting allegations of neglect and poor living conditions from the BJP. The cause of the deaths at Asha Kiran shelter home is not known yet. Noting that the number of deaths was much higher than last year, the SDM said the real cause of the fatalities would be known after the post-mortem reports. The report by the SDM has raised questions about the quality of drinking water being provided to the children. The National Commission for Women (NCW) has sent a fact-finding team to the shelter home while lashing out at the AAP government for negligence. "For years, the Asha Kiran shelter home run by the Delhi government has lost all ash (hope). People are suffering and dying in it and the Delhi government does nothing, nothing at all. Taking cognisance and sending my team to enquire into it," NCW chairperson Rekha Sharma said. She said the NCW was also carrying out an audit of night shelters run by the Delhi government.

Delhi minister Atishi, however, differed on the number of deaths and asked the additional chief secretary (ACS) of the Revenue department to initiate a magisterial probe and submit a report in 48 hours. In her letter, Atishi noted that there were 14 deaths since January 2024 at the shelter home. The minister also sought recommendations on action to be taken against those whose negligence had caused the deaths. She also sought suggestive measures to be taken to prevent the occurrence of such incidents in the future.

BJP VS AAP OVER SHELTER HOME DEATHS

A team from the Delhi BJP has also reached Asha Kiran shelter home to take stock of the situation. "As per our information, the children are getting dirty water, they don't get food, they don't get treatment. An inquiry should be conducted and all the officers who are involved in this should be punished," Rekha Gupta, BJP Mahila Morcha vice president, said.

Hitting out at the BJP, Delhi minister Gopal Rai said the leaders of the saffron party did not visit the home of the mother and son who had drowned in a drain in Mayur Vihar. "The BJP is protesting.

But, they did not protest when a woman and her son died in Mayur Vihar after slipping into a drain. They came to protest at Asha Kiran because they know that it comes under the Delhi government," Rai said. He also said the concerned minister was closely monitoring the case and the guilty people would not be spared. "The Delhi government stands with the people," he said.

Rain fury across many north Indian states, more showers likely in Delhi

New Delhi: At least 14 people died and 10 more were injured in heavy overnight rains that triggered flooding and a house collapse as several rivers swelled in Uttarakhand on Thursday. This came as the India Meteorological Department (IMD) said India is predicted to record above-normal rainfall in August and September, with a high possibility of landslides and floods. The Kedarnath Yatra was suspended as heavy rain triggered landslides in many places.

The trek route remains blocked by boulders at Ghoraparav, Lincholi, Badi Lincholi and Bhimbali, officials told news agency PTI. In an official statement, the Uttarakhand government said the Centre has dispatched two Indian Air Force helicopters, a Chinook and an MI 17, to aid rescue operations in the state after the Prime Minister's Office (PMO) took stock of the situation in the wake of the intense showers. So far, 425 pilgrims have been brought to safety in helicopters from Lincholi and Bhimbali, while 1,100 pilgrims have reached Sonprayag on foot from various places with the help of rescue teams, according to police. Neighbouring Himachal Pradesh also reeled under monsoon fury as multiple cloudburst incidents killed five people and left about 50 missing. Homes, roads and bridges were swept away by torrents of mud and water. The state emergency operation centre said the cloudbursts occurred in Nirmand, Sainj and Malana areas in Kullu district, Padhar in Mandi and Rampur district in Shimla district. The Manali-Chandigarh National Highway has been damaged at several places due to landslides, an official said.

FLASH FLOODS IN JAMMU KASHMIR

While most parts of Jammu and Kashmir received moderate rainfall on Thursday, torrential downpours in some parts triggered flash floods. The Dachan area of Kishtwar and the Khrew area of Pulwama experienced torrential rains, leading to flash floods in these localities.

308 dead in Wayanad landslides, drone-based radar to look for survivors

New Delhi: The death toll in Tuesday's massive landslides in Kerala's Wayanad district crossed the 300 mark on Friday with rescuers racing against time to search for survivors who are still trapped in collapsed buildings and under the debris. So far, 308 people have died in the landslides triggered by heavy rainfall in the hilly areas of Wayanad. Rescue operations, which entered the fourth day, will be further widened and also include a drone-based radar to find the survivors. Over 200 people suffered injuries as rescue efforts were hampered by various challenges, including treacherous terrain due to destroyed roads and bridges, and a shortage of equipment and a shortage of heavy equipment, making it difficult for emergency personnel to clear mud and uprooted trees that fell on houses and other buildings.

WAYANAD RESCUE OPERATIONS UPDATES

A joint team comprising the Indian Army, NDRF, Coast Guard and the Indian Navy were conducting the searches in the affected areas. Each team will have three locals and one forest department employee. Forty teams of rescue personnel will divide the search areas into six zones to carry out the rescue operations. The first zone consists of Attamala and Aaranmala. Mundakkai is the second zone, Punjirimattam is the third zone, Vellarimala Village Road is the fourth zone, GVHS and Vellarimala is the fifth zone and downstream of the river Chaliyar is the sixth zone.

Police personnel from eight police stations surrounding the river and locals who are experts in swimming will also participate in the searches. Meanwhile, the Indian Army found four people -- two men and two women -- who were stranded in Padavetti Kunnu in Wayanad. They were evacuated by helicopter. However, one of the rescued women is experiencing difficulties with her leg and is receiving necessary medical attention. As many as 25 ambulances will cross the Bailey Bridge constructed by the Indian Army in record time to Mundakkai after the structure collapsed due to the landslides. The Indian Air Force will deploy its C-130 aircraft from Hindon airbase in Ghaziabad for the rescue operations and will carry specialised drone systems along with a team of experts to Wayanad for sub-soil evacuation monitoring and searching for survivors.

South Delhi school evacuated after receiving bomb threat via email

New Delhi: Summer Fields School in Delhi was on Friday evacuated after the authorities received a bomb threat via an email. According to the details, the email was received at 12.30 am on Friday. However, the authorities noticed the email only after the school was opened this morning. The school is located in South Delhi's posh Greater Kailash area. The police were informed, and an evacuation was ordered on the school premises. As the investigation into the case progressed, the police said they suspect it was a hoax call. The case was registered, and a probe was underway. Commenting on the email, Shalini Agarwal, the school principal said the students were evacuated within 10 minutes after the authorities saw the email. She also said the school premises was being checked by the bomb squad. "We received an email late at night which was checked early morning today. As per the SOP, we evacuated the students within 10 minutes of receiving the email. We informed the police and district administration, and we are thankful to the police - they supported us magnificently as they came immediately," she told reporters.

"There are hardly any students here, we are just waiting for a few parents to come and collect their wards." "Police and bomb squad are here and they are checking the premises. There was absolutely no panic amongst the parents," she added. In June this year, several museums in Delhi received a bomb threat, which later turned out to be a hoax.

Prior to that, many schools and hospitals in Delhi received bomb threat emails, which also turned out to be hoaxes.

took into account the various statements issued by Dhindsa in the recent past as well as the manner in which he took on the leadership of the eight expelled party leaders on Wednesday. Disciplinary committee

"Instead of doing this, the disgruntled leaders became part of a conspiracy scripted in Nagpur to weaken and divide the party. These leaders have even given credence to the wild allegations of the main perpetrator of the sacrilege of Sri Guru Granth Sahib in 2015", Bhundur said.

Now the party has taken definite action against Mr Dhindsa to set the record straight", he added. Meanwhile, the disciplinary committee members said that indiscipline would not be tolerated at any cost even as it appealed to Punjabis to shun opportunist persons who had entered into a conspiracy with agencies to weaken the party.

Kumar Choudhary as the accused. A probe held by a panel formed by the District Magistrate revealed that AR Mir and his agents were running a fake cryptocurrency business under the name 'Emoilient Coin Limited' from an office at the Anjuman Moin-Ul complex in Leh. Following the probe, the panel closed the office. In an elaborate scheme, individuals were enticed into buying the fake cryptocurrency, Emoilient Coin, through cash, bank transfers, or Bitcoin exchanges via a mobile app. The scam promised investors returns of up to 40% after a 10-month lock-in period. Additionally, investors were incentivised to recruit others, earning commissions of up to 7% for direct referrals. This multi-level marketing structure offered further commissions of 3% at the second level and 1% for subsequent levels up to the tenth, creating a complex and deceptive financial web. The investigation revealed that 2,508 investors had invested a total of Rs. 7,34,36,267 in the scheme.

Your anxiety is making your kids Aggressive

You may want to be warm as well as restrictive if you want to limit the amount of violent video games that your kids play as a recent study has suggested so.

Parents who are more anxious and emotional can impact the amount of violent video games their children play, according to new consumer research from Iowa State University.

Researcher Russell Lacniak says given the harmful effects of violent video games, he and his colleagues wanted to better understand how parents influence children's behavior. They found that parents who were more warm and restrictive were more successful in limiting children's play of violent video games. However, highly emotional and anxious parents had the opposite effect - their children played more.

It's not surprising that warmer and more restrictive parents, or what we call authoritative, are most effective at reducing the amount of violent video games played by their children, Lacniak said, adding that if parents are more anxious, their message is not as well received by their children and it inhibits what they're trying to do.

In the paper, researchers explain that warm parents tend to refrain from physical discipline and show approval through affection. Restrictive parents set and enforce firm rules for the household. Anxious-emotional parents are often overprotective and show elevated emotions when interacting with their children.

Lacniak says the biggest takeaway for parents is to set limits and be more calmly detached in the relations with their children, adding that for parents, who are more anxious, the rules become less effective and those kids are going to play more.

Right from the time corporal punishment has been banned, it is extremely difficult to control children. However, it is for parents to take it up in a fun way....

To inculcate good values and discipline in kids is surely an umpteen task as schools these days have taken a rather lenient way to educating them. Right from the time corporal punishment has been banned, it is extremely difficult to control children. However, it is for parents to take it up in a fun way....

Reward them when do good
This helps a lot, whenever your child is seen in his best of behaviour, reward him. For instance, if there's a month when there's not a single complaint from school about his in discipline or he has been a good child when you were away for some work till late. This will motivate him to stay disciplined.

Set ground rules
Make a list of all his indiscretions and a punishment for every action. This will make your child cautious of his older, their needs go up. Shruti and Zubi's non-profit initiative 'A place to bark' registers that labradors top the abandonment list. "People buy them thinking they are cute as pups. But once they grow older, their energy multiples and so do their bodies. They need a lot of exercise and most people can't give them that much of dedicated everyday time," they say.

Pomeranians. "Poms, as pups, are very small and adorable. But as they grow they tend to yap and bark a lot. It is also very difficult to rehouse them as they come under the category of 'single parent' dog. So they need to be socialised before they can be re-sheltered," adds Shruti.

Another people-run organisation Noah's Army also reveals that 35-40 per cent of their rescue cases have been pedigree dogs, including ill-treated dogs. "Our rescues are mostly accident-hit, injured, or tortured dogs. We just started in February this year and although our primary focus was to feed and help strays, we were surprised to see the number of pedigree dogs that are ill-treated," says Rahul, a member of Noah's Army. Once these dogs are rescued, these animal-lovers foster them at homes and after a span of six weeks, they are given to loving families. Some of these nonprofits have tie ups with shelters as well. For rescue and fostering, these volunteers work with help from donors of money, pet food or medical needs.

After deducting the refunds, net GST collection during the month rose 14.4% to Rs 1.66 lakh crore. Net collection for the fiscal has been Rs 6.6 lakh crore, up 11% over last year. However, Karnataka and Gujarat (13%), MP and Maharashtra (11% each) saw double-digit growth. Apple's quarterly profit beats forecast, pins hopes on AI as China sales falter

NEW DELHI. Apple Inc reported a strong financial performance for the June quarter, with a profit of $21.4 billion on revenue of $85.8 billion, marking a new record for the period and a 5% increase from the previous year. CEO Tim Cook expressed enthusiasm for the company's upcoming AI-powered tools, collectively known as Apple Intelligence, which are expected to drive user engagement and device sales.

In China, a critical market for Apple, sales continued to decline, dropping 7% from the previous year. This decline, though concerning, was less severe than in the previous quarter. Despite these challenges, Apple maintains a strong financial position, with quarterly earnings per share at $1.40, above Wall Street estimates. Sales in other segments, including the Mac and iPad, showed growth, while the wearables segment saw a slight decline. iPhone revenue slightly declined to $39.3 billion compared to the same quarter last year, while the company experienced solid growth in the iPad segment, generating $7.2 billion in revenue. Apple also reported a new high in active devices across all geographic regions, although specific figures were not provided. Analysts weighed in on Apple's AI strategy, with Emarketer analyst Jacob Bourne noting that the company has tied its AI efforts to core business components, particularly the iPhone. The effectiveness of Apple's AI investments will primarily be measured by device sales and potential growth in subscription revenue. As the company prepares to launch its AI-powered features, the market eagerly awaits the impact on iPhone demand and overall performance.

Apple's shares experienced a minor uptick of 0.5% in after-hours trading following the earnings report. As the tech giant gears up to make its mark in the AI space, investors and industry experts will closely monitor its progress and the reception of its new AI-driven offerings. Looking ahead, Apple plans to integrate various AI features in its products, including making its virtual assistant Siri smarter. These features, part of a free software update expected in the autumn, will initially be available on premium iPhone models equipped with a special AI chip.

Sensex down 700 points, investors lose Rs 4 lakh crore. What triggered the fall

New Delhi. Benchmark stock market indices opened sharply lower, leading to significant losses for investors. The S&P BSE Sensex plummeted 814 points to 81,026, and the NSE Nifty50 dropped 282 points to 24,728 around 9:48 am. The decline resulted in over Rs 4 lakh crore loss in market capitalisation for all listed companies on the BSE.

However, markets have pared some losses. At around 11:38 am, Sensex was down 625.7 points to 81,241.85, while the Nifty50 traded 192.10 points lower at 24,818.80.

The sell-off affected all major sectoral indices, with Nifty Metal and PSU Bank suffering the most, each falling over 2%. Meanwhile, the Nifty Smallcap100 and Nifty Midcap100, which focus more on domestic markets, fell over 1% each. Here are some of the top factors behind the weakness on Dalal Street:

Tech sell-off in US markets

The Indian equity market followed the downward trend in US markets. On Thursday, US stocks tumbled due to weak manufacturing data, raising doubts about the US economy and offsetting optimism about potential Federal Reserve interest rate cuts. The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 1.57% to 40,200, the S&P 500 lost 1.76% to 5,424, and the Nasdaq Composite dropped 2.76% to 17,114. In early Asian trading hours, US stock futures continued to decline, with Nasdaq futures tumbling 1.5% and S&P 500 futures falling 0.9%.

Asian markets in red

Asian shares also slid following weaker-than-expected US factory data, sparking fears of a worsening economic outlook. MSCI's broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan slumped 0.8% in early Asia trade. Japan's Nikkei was headed for its worst day in over four years, weighed down by a surging yen and uncertainty over potential rises in domestic interest rates. It was last down 4.89%, on track for its steepest daily fall since March 2020.

Missing trigger in earnings

The June quarter earnings season has been in line with expectations, but analysts note there were no major positive surprises to drive the market higher. ICICI Securities reported that Q1FY25 results showed a ratio of earnings beats to misses of 1.9:1 for the NSE200 universe. While sectors like banking, financial services, IT, FMCG, and oil & gas saw higher beats and inline earnings, the pharma, cement, and metal sectors experienced misses.

Rise in oil prices

Oil prices rose on Friday amid concerns over potential supply disruptions in the Middle East. Brent crude futures gained 62 cents, or 0.75%, to $80.12 a barrel, while US West Texas Intermediate crude futures rose 61 cents, or 0.8%, to $76.92. These increases add pressure to global inflation.

Zomato shares hit record high after Q1 results. Will it cross Rs 350 mark

New Delhi. Shares of online food delivery giant Zomato surged by up to 19% to Rs 278.7 after the company posted strong June quarter results, prompting brokerages to raise their price targets. In fact, CLSA has raised its target price for Zomato's stock to Rs 350, which is the highest among all other brokerage firms tracking the food delivery giant's shares. The brokerage has maintained its 'Buy' recommendation for the stock. CLSA also raised its earnings estimates for Zomato by 6% to 36% for the financial years 2025 to 2027, noting improved performance from Blinkit despite the rapid expansion of dark stores. Brokerage firm Motilal Oswal also upped its price target for Zomato to Rs 300, citing Blinkit's significant potential to disrupt retail, grocery, and e-commerce industries. The brokerage anticipates Zomato will achieve margins of 4% in FY 2025 and 8.7% in FY 2026, while acknowledging the difficulty in valuing Blinkit accurately. Other brokerage firms such as Equiris and ICICI Securities have also set targets of Rs 300 or higher for Zomato. Out of 28 analysts covering the stock, 25 have a "Buy" rating.

Morgan Stanley retained its "overweight" rating and raised its target from Rs 235 to Rs 278, citing Zomato's goals of 20%+ growth in food delivery, expanding to 2,000 quick commerce stores by 2026, and launching a new app for the "going out" segment. Nomura upgraded its price target from Rs 225 to Rs 280, praising Zomato's growth trajectory and improving profitability in both food delivery and quick commerce sectors. Citi described Zomato's results as a "stellar quarter," maintaining its "buy" rating and increasing its price target to Rs 280 from Rs 235. Jefferies, while noting potential volatility from Blinkit's expansion plans, raised its target from Rs 230 to Rs 275, keeping a "buy" rating.

Top 3 carmakers report decline in July sales

NEW DELHI. Despite partial relief from the intense heat wave and election fervour subsiding completely, passenger vehicle (PV) sales remained under pressure in July 2024 with the top 3 carmakers reporting a dip in sales. The fall comes even as original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) and deal showrooms are offering hefty discounts to lure buyers. Domestic PV sales of Maruti Suzuki (MSIL), India's largest carmaker, fell 9.6% YoY to 137,463 units in July 2024 as against 152,126 units in the corresponding month last year. IPO-bound Hyundai Motor India (MSIL) domestic sales fell 3.33% YoY to 49,013 units in July 2024 as against 50,701 units in July 2023. Tarun Garg, Whole-time director and chief operating officer, HML said, "SUVs continue to demonstrate a robust contribution, accounting for 66.6% of total HML domestic sales. The new Hyundai CRETA achieved key milestones of 1 lakh unit sales till July 2024, while also achieving highest ever monthly domestic sales of 17,350 units in July 2024."

Tata Motors' domestic PV sales fell 6% to 44,725 units in July 2024 from 47,628 units in July 2023. Its electric vehicle plummeted 21% to 5,027 units last month as demand from fleet operators dried up. The automaker said that although demand has remained less than anticipated, they expect it to pick up during festive period. "New product launches will augur well for the business. Our focus is to increase addressable market by introducing new nameplates, strengthen multipowertrain strategy to leverage industry powertrain shifts and grow the EV market in India while maintaining market leadership," Tata Motors said in its result. Meanwhile, SUV majors Mahindra & Mahindra (M&M) and Toyota (TKM) continue to report healthy growth in sales.

Infosys GST notice saga: Why it led to an outcry among IT firms, legal experts

New Delhi. The information technology (IT) sector was recently shaken by a substantial Goods and Services Tax (GST) notice issued to Infosys. The Karnataka state authorities had sent a "pre-show cause" notice to the IT giant, demanding Rs 32,403 crore in GST claims. The notice has since been withdrawn, but it sparked significant concern within the industry, raising questions about the GST enforcement mechanism and its understanding of the IT sector's operating model.

Initial GST Notice to Infosys

The controversy began when the Karnataka government sent a notice to Infosys, claiming the company was liable to pay Integrated GST (IGST) under the reverse charge mechanism for "supply of services" by its foreign branches from FY18 to FY22. The revenue department's interpretation was that expenses for overseas branches were payments for services delivered by the offshore offices of the Indian entity. According to experts, this interpretation was contentious because it implied that reimbursements for expenses could be construed as payments for services, and that foreign branches were distinct legal entities from their Indian unit. Industry outcry over Infosys GST notice

The issuance of such a substantial GST notice led to an outcry from the IT industry and experts. The National Association of Software and Service Companies (Nasscom), an industry lobby group, criticised the notice. It stated that the notice reflected a misunderstanding of the IT industry's operating model. Nasscom highlighted that government circulars based on GST Council recommendations should be respected to avoid creating uncertainty and negatively impacting India's ease of doing business. Recent media reports of a GST demand of over Rs 320 billion (Rs 32,403 crore) reflect a lack of understanding of the industry's operating model. This is an industry-wide issue, and multiple companies are facing avoidable litigation, uncertainty, and concerns from investors and customers. Nasscom said without naming issue was even addressed during the erstwhile service tax law, where favorable judgments were delivered by the Customs, Excise, and Service Tax Appellate Tribunal (CESTAT)," Nasscom added. Withdrawal of the notice

A day after the initial notice, Infosys announced that the Karnataka state authorities had withdrawn the GST notice. The company received communication that directed it to submit further responses to the Directorate General of GST Intelligence (DGII). The move has shifted the oversight of the tax probe to the DGII.

What do experts say?

Experts have voiced concerns about the potential precedent set by issuing such a large notice. Rajat Mohan, director at accounting firm MOORE Singh, indicated that more tax notices for similar alleged violations could follow, particularly targeting multinational companies in the IT sector.

From highs of T20 WC to a new dawn of Indian cricket: Rohit's message for fans

New Delhi. A new dawn for Indian cricket has begun with the change in the guard of T20I captaincy and appointment of a new head coach, Gautam Gambhir. After a clean-sweep in the T20I series against Sri Lanka, team India will aim to do a repeat of it in the 50-over format. The difference this time? Two of the stalwarts of Indian cricket, Rohit Sharma and Virat Kohli, are making a comeback in ODIs after eight months. The duo, who have dominated the 50-over format for a decade, will aim to make a memorable comeback. Ahead of the start of the series, Rohit delivered a special and rather emotional message to all the Indian cricket fans. The video captured all the memorable moments that the fans and the players shared a few weeks ago. From Rohit's captain's shoot in Barbados to the victory parade near Marine Drive, the iconic dance at the Wankhede Stadium, the video had it all.

Beginning of new era

Rohit, in the video, said that he still has the urge to put his pads on and play for India in the shortest format. In his usual avatar, the captain addressed the fans and said that the last one month has been really special, filled with memories.

"Wow, what a month it was. Maza hee agaya. Flooded with memories, etched in history. A moment like this, which will stay with us forever. So much so that I feel I can put my pads on anytime for the shortest format. Nahi yar, choro bhai. I had my time. I enjoyed it, and it's time to move on," Rohit said in the BCCI video.

IND vs SL 1st ODI: Match Preview

Rohit also said that the series would be marking the start of a new era with many fresh and old talents in the side. "It's time for us to get back on the field with the start of a new era. A new start with a new coach. A partnership that is going to hold Indian cricket as paramount. It's time to hit the reset button. It's time for us to get back on to the field.

First ODI: Rohit Sharma, Virat Kohli to start fresh against Sri Lanka

CHENNAI. India might have swept Sri Lanka 3-0 in the shortest format, but come Friday, they will have to start fresh with the senior pros, including captain Rohit Sharma and Virat Kohli, back in the mix. For the skipper, and the newly-appointed head coach Gautam Gambhir, a new partnership begins as it will be the first time they work together in their respective roles for the Indian team.

Rohit, however, isn't worried as much as he explained what lies ahead on the eve of the first ODI. "I have known Gambhir for a very long time and we have played a little bit of cricket together. He has a very clear mind and knows what he wants from the team," he said, before adding, "Basically, our chats have centred around what the team needs, what are our shortcomings, BENGALURU: The National AntiDoping Agency (NADA) conducted a session for Indian cricketers at the National Cricket Academy to spread awareness about doping in sports and how to create a fair sporting environment for athletes. Dortmund signs Gross from Brighton where have we done well etc. It was a discussion on how to take the team forward. But we don't want to plan too far ahead. We are here for three games, and the idea is to take something back from these three games, and learn how we want to play and what we want to achieve in ODI cricket." Rohit reiterated that maintaining the standard of Indian cricket and everything else comes after. "At the end of the day, the standard of Indian cricket is more important and while doing that if you lose a game then it is absolutely fine. You are still trying to do something different and you are not compromising on the standard. We are a sports team, a cricket team, and we should also be allowed to lose while we are trying to do things differently. We want to achieve something out of every series or game we play, but not at the cost of not showing intent or purpose," he said.

Simone Biles claims sixth Olympic Gold in Paris, win women's all-around title

Simone Biles won her sixth Olympic gold in Paris, securing the women's all-around title for the second time. At 27, she became the oldest champion since 1952, extending her record as the most decorated gymnast with 39 career medals.

New Delhi Simone Biles added another chapter to her legendary career by winning her sixth Olympic gold medal and her second of the Paris Games on Thursday. In a closely contested final, Biles triumphed over Brazil's Rebeca Andrade to capture the women's all-around title for the second time. The 27-year-old gymnast returned to the top of the gymnastics world eight years after winning her first Olympic all-around title in Rio. Biles is now only the third woman to win this prestigious title more than once, joining Larisa Latynina of the Soviet Union (1956 and 1960) and Vera Caslavská of Czechoslovakia (1964 and 1968).

Biles, a once-in-a-lifetime athlete known for making the extraordinary look effortless, led the field of 24 gymnasts with a score of 59.131 points. Andrade finished nearly two points behind, earning a silver medal, while Biles's US teammate Suni Lee, the defending Olympic all-around champion who has battled multiple kidney diseases over the past two years, secured the bronze medal. "I just couldn't believe that I did it," Biles said afterward. "I know that I did it, but I don't think it's hit me just yet. It will probably hit me whenever I go back to the [Olympic Village]. I'm just ecstatic with my performances tonight. And we still have three finals left for me. Now it's time to have fun and the hard part is over."

Simone Biles creates history

Biles also became the oldest women's all-around Olympic champion since Maria Gorokhovskaya of the Soviet Union, who won gold in 1952 at the age of 30. Biles continues the American dominance in the event, becoming the sixth straight US woman to win the title, following Sunisa Lee (2021), herself (2016), Gabby Douglas (2012), Nastia Liukin (2008), and Carly Patterson (2004).

This historic victory marks Biles's 39th career medal between the Olympics and world championships, extending her record as the most decorated gymnast in history. Since winning her first national title in 2013, she has claimed every all-around competition she has entered. The final in Paris featured multiple former Olympic champions, including Biles and Lee, but it was primarily a showdown between Biles and Andrade. Biles began on the vault, executing a sky-high Yurchenko double pike and scoring 15.766 despite a few steps back on the landing. Andrade's Cheng vault earned her 15.100, setting up a close competition. On the uneven bars, traditionally Biles's weakest event, Andrade scored 14.666. Biles made a significant error but managed a score of 13.733. After two rotations, Biles was in second place, trailing Andrade by 0.267 points. However, Biles's strength on the balance beam and floor exercise propelled her back to the top.

Biles overcomes challenges to win gold
Biles's latest win highlights her longevity and resilience, especially after her Tokyo 2020 withdrawal due to "twisties." Since then, she has focused on her mental health and returned stronger than ever. Incorporating music from Taylor Swift and Beyoncé into her routines, Biles continues to inspire and break boundaries. Reflecting on the eight-year gap between her all-around gold medals, Biles said, "It feels amazing. I was a little bit naive in the process. So I appreciate my craft a little bit more." Simone Biles's achievements in Paris further cement her status as the greatest gymnast of all time, and her journey continues to inspire fans around the world.

Harbhajan Singh's sarcastic jibe at Pak journo over security issues in country

New Delhi Former India cricketer Harbhajan Singh slammed a Pakistani journalist who tried to target him for his stance over India's participation in the Champion Trophy 2025. Harbhajan took a sarcastic jibe at the Pakistani journalist who tried to mock him. Harbhajan had supported BCCI's stance of not wanting to send the Indian team to Pakistan for the upcoming Champions Trophy 2025. The journalist posted a scorecard of Harbhajan getting hit for four sixes by Shahid Afridi during India's tour to Pakistan in 2006. The Pakistani journalist tried to mock the former India player by saying that these are the kind of security issues he has been pointing out. Harbhajan retweeted the post and shared a screenshot from a newspaper from 2009 when the Sri Lankan team bus was attacked by Pakistani terrorists. He used this reference to point out the security concerns within the country and suggested that this was the reason as to why the Indian team should not travel to Pakistan. "No not for this. Cricket Mai Jeet har lagi rehti hai. I will tell u the real problem is this. Check the photo. Now get the Fāēē. out of here. F ka Matlab samaj aa gya hogya ya samjau? F means ur name. Plz don't think what u r thinking th meaning of F. You know what I mean ??Peace," Harbhajan wrote in the caption on X.

Harbhajan slams Pakistani journalist
Pakistan bagged the hosting rights for the Champions Trophy 2025. The country will host a mega event after more than two decades. After the terror attack on Sri Lanka's team bus, Pakistan was banned from hosting any international matches for a decade. Other countries have started touring Pakistan now, but amid the cross-border tensions between India and Pakistan, there is no green signal to their travel to the neighbouring country. During last year's Asia Cup, as well as when Pakistan were hosts, India played all their games in Sri Lanka. The BCCI is keen on getting neutral venues like Sri Lanka or the UAE for the Champions Trophy matches in 2025.

SL vs IND: Sri Lanka needs sharpening of cricket awareness, says coach Jayasuriya

New Delhi. Sri Lanka's interim coach Sanath Jayasuriya doesn't see a lack of commitment in the side and feels the players' cricket awareness needs to be sharpened ahead of the start of the ODI series against India. Sri Lanka ended up being beaten by India 3-0 in the T20I series after losing all three matches from winnable positions. In the final match, Sri Lanka lost 7 wickets for 27 runs as India took the game into a super over and won it.

Speaking ahead of the 1st ODI against India on August 2, Jayasuriya felt that the players need to learn on how to tackle pressure better. He would open up about the 'cricket awareness' aspect by telling that the players need to think about taking 2s and 3s on the big grounds in Sri Lanka, instead of just looking at big hits.

SL vs IND 1st ODI: Preview

"I don't see a lack of commitment, but they have got to tackle pressure better. Their cricket awareness also needs sharpening.

We are taking the responsibility; you can't go away from that. As long as they realise that, and make sure that, we'll have to keep giving them the confidence and support." "When you talk about power hitting, I don't think you need that much," Jayasuriya said. "If you hit enough fours and enough twos, you get the total that you need. The [Sri Lankan] grounds are a little bigger. There's no reason why you can't hit boundaries, or twos, or threes. If you can do that, you can get by without hitting so many sixes."

Jayasuriya backs Asalanka

Charith Asalanka would take over as the captain of the white-ball team during the T20I series and Jayasuriya backed him to perform well as the skipper. The interim coach said that Asalanka should be given time to perform as a captain.

"Charith Asalanka is one of our best players in this format, and we need to remember that," Jayasuriya said. "But when you get the captaincy, there is some pressure. I've been there too. You have got to give them a little time in that position."

"There are ten more players in the side, and 16 in the squad. We all have to get together and give him the confidence too. At any moment, the captain could click. Charith Asalanka is someone who works really hard. He's very professional and communicates well."

PV Sindhu has no regrets with Paris Olympics preparation, rues defensive errors

New Delhi India's ace shuttler PV Sindhu had no regrets over the way she prepared for the Paris Olympics 2024 but felt her defence let her down in the Round Of 16 clash against China's He Bing Jiao on Thursday, August 1. Sindhu had a close contest with Jiao on Thursday but ultimately came up short in the contest. The Chinese shuttler won the battle 21-19 21-14 in 56 minutes. This would end Sindhu's quest for a hat-trick of medals at the Olympics. The Indian ace, while talking to PTI, said that she should have controlled things in terms of her errors while defending. Sindhu, who trained with Prakash Padukone in Germany for the games, felt everyone did their best to get her ready for Paris and the rest was destiny. "I should have controlled in terms of a little bit of mistakes on my defense is what I felt," Sindhu said, reflecting upon the reason for her defeat. "Everybody worked hard, so we've done whatever we could. Rest is destiny. I don't regret it," she said.

"I kept fighting still because you never know anything can happen. Both of us were fighting for each point because until the end you can't expect. "It's not easy win or easy points, you can't think that you have finished the game."

LA Olympics still 4 years away

Sindhu also commented on being at the LA Olympics and felt that it was still 4 years away. The Indian ace said she is currently focused on resting up a bit and taking a break and coming back. "It's still four years away. So for me, right now, I just go back and rest for a bit, maybe just take some break and then come back and let's see what it is because four years is a very, very long time. So let's see," the 29-year-old said.

"It's sad. The result, I couldn't get what I expected, but it's a journey, isn't it? "It's been a wonderful journey so far. There were ups and downs, and I came back from an injury, and everything was going on well. You can't expect easy wins or picking the form at the right time. Sometimes it might not be your day. We all really worked hard." With Sindhu and Satwik-Chirag's exit, Lakshya Sen is India's only hope in Badminton at the Paris Olympics 2024.

Unfortunate for Lakshya and Prannoy to face each other in R16: Prakash Padukone

New Delhi The majority of the Indian badminton contingent were wiped out of the Paris Olympics on Thursday, August 1. While PV Sindhu was knocked out by China's He Bing Jiao, men's doubles duo of Satwiksairaj Rankireddy and Chirag Shetty fell in a gruelling 3-game battle against Malaysian pair of Chia-Yik. However, the most hurtful result of the day was HS Prannoy getting knocked out by compatriot Lakshya Sen in the Round of 16 match at the Games. Prannoy and Lakshya, who are playing their maiden Olympics, were expected to be medal contenders in Paris. However, due to the nature of the draw, unseeded Lakshya faced 13th-seed Prannoy in the early stages of the tournament. Reacting to the same, legendary Prakash Padukone said that it was unfortunate for the duo to meet this early in the tournament. However, the former player and a coach added that it was the nature of the game and one had to obey the rules.

"It happens all the time, even in the BWF events. So in the first round itself, you meet each other. I think one of the Chinese doubles, they meet in the pre-quarter itself. It happens, the rules are very clear. It's already announced beforehand. It doesn't matter which country you come from," Prakash Padukone told IndiToday on Thursday, August 1.

Paris Olympics 2024: India Schedule | Full Coverage | Medal Tally

"But in the men's singles, I think it was a draw and it happens. You know, if there are two good players, sometimes you do. It's a little unfortunate, but I think one has to obey the rules and follow," he further added. Asked about Lakshya Sen's chances of winning a medal in the Paris Olympics, Padukone said that Lakshya was in good form. However, his praise came with a slight caution and warning, where he stated that past results did not matter in the Olympics and one had to overcome the pressure on the day that they were playing.

"I think he's in good form. I think a lot of the credit goes to the team led by Vimal. I'm of course helping them but you know, in terms of strategy and tactics they really worked hard. He seems to be in good form but needs to maintain his form for the next three or four days. As of now he seems good, but I think each day is different. I always keep saying that the past result, the future results, whether you have beaten him in the past, all of that does not matter. Just this one week, you have to be at your best. You have to try to reach the peak, and that's what we are hoping for from Lakshya," Padukone said. It was not meant to be for Satwiksairaj Rankireddy and Chirag Shetty. The former World No. 1 and Asian Games gold medalists were knocked out in the quarter-finals of men's doubles badminton at the Paris Olympics on Thursday, August 1. One of India's biggest medal hopes, Satwik and Chirag lost to higher-ranked Aaron Chia and Wooi Yik Soh of Malaysia in three games - 21-13, 14-21, 16-21, in an hour and 4 minutes on Court 3 at the La Chappelle Arena in Paris.
